Slaytons plan ahead

By JOANNE HODGEN

"I TOLD MY HUSBAND this morning that the count is 24.

"He said, 'You mean people?'"

That total was reported by Pat Slayton to her husband, Larry, one week before they were to celebrate Thanksgiving.

The Carmel couple is sitting down today with a hungry horde of daughters, sons, nephews, nieces, daughters- and sons-in-law, girlfriends, boyfriends and just plain friends and one grandmother to celebrate a day of Thanksgiving.

AND NOT UNLIKE the Plymouth Pilgrims who shared a bountiful harvest 359 years ago, the Slayton clan is sharing a family harvest of camaraderie, laughter and love.

Eight children — she has five and he has three from previous marriages — have come from Oregon, Texas, Minnesota, Santa Barbara and Oakland for the second annual Thanksgiving reunion, Mrs. Slayton said.

She explained the annual migration began after she and her husband moved back to Carmel from Minnesota, where they lived from 1975 to 1979. They resided in Carmel previously.

"I told them (the family) they could do whatever for Christmas, but come home for Thanksgiving," Mrs. Slayton said.

"Everybody looks forward to it. Phone calls daily count it down . . . six more days . . . five more days," she said.

What she described as a "pretty rowdy group" began arriving Saturday, with everyone finally settling in Wednesday evening, according to Mrs. Slayton.

Where do they all sleep?

"I'm not sure where we'll be putting them. We have three rooms here (at the Carmel Sands) and are trying to rent a cottage. But they all have orders to bring sleeping

Carmel revenue up slightly

Motels are full, sales are down

By JOANNE HODGEN

REVENUE FOR CARMEL from its two main sources — sales and hostelry tax — slightly surpasses city estimates so far for fiscal 1980-81.

The city projected sales tax revenue, returned to Carmel by the state, of $950,000 for fiscal 1980-81. Carmel Finance Officer Jim Bajari said that revenue July 1 through Oct. 31 was $227,592, or 23.9 percent of the expected total.

However, he said that $468,000, or 48 percent of the projected hostelry (hotels and motels) revenue already fill the city coffers, though only one-third of the fiscal year has passed.

The city anticipated $975,000 in hostelry tax revenue for fiscal 1980-81.

Bajari said he is optimistic that the sales tax revenue will increase during the Christmas season.

During the same period of fiscal 1979-80, sales tax revenue was $267,620, or 31.6 percent of the expected $845,000 total for that fiscal year, according to Bajari.

Overall, the city projections are on target, with 32 percent of the revenue counted, according to Bajari. He said that in 1978 during the same period only $1,268,000, or 22.7 percent of the projected revenue had been collected.

Other city revenue sources include license fees and parking fines.

Bajari said the sales tax total, which is $40,028 less this year than last, indicates that business is slowing down. "Those are recessionary numbers. It shows people are not spending as much," according to Bajari.

LEE CHAMBERLIN, executive secretary of the Carmel Business Association, said merchants are reporting a good year.

"I'm hearing awfully good things. Everybody is very pleased about their business," she said.

However, though business overall is good, she said City Hall may have been too optimistic when it made the yearly sales tax revenue projection. "They're dreaming," she said.

Bajari said that in fiscal 1978-79, the projected sales tax revenue during the first four months was $228,000 or 27.2 percent of the yearly projection. Sales tax revenues totaled $837,980 that year.

The state Board of Equalization distributes sales tax revenue to cities and counties. The state returns one-fourth of the six percent sales tax to the city that generated the taxable transaction.

Sales volume advanced 12 percent from February to July. Inflation, at about 15 percent, stole all gains, leaving Carmel merchants about 3 percent behind last year.

The Board of Equalization said the volume of business in the state subject to California's sales and use taxes shrank sharply during the second quarter of 1980 (April, May and June).

"Forced up as they were by pressures on prices, the quarterly sales figures adjusted for inflation were actually 8.3 percent less than the prior year's level, reflecting further weakening of the state's economy. Quarter sales performance was the weakest it had been in 22 years," according to the state agency.

The decreasing sales revenue may reflect a downturn for Carmel businesses though some merchants say otherwise.

A CARMEL apparel shop manager, who asked that her name be withheld, said that business was better from July to October than it was last year during the same period.

"If one (store) is doing well then the rest of us are," she said.

She stated that during the Christmas season she expects the shop to do as well as or better than it did last year.

Skyrocketing hostelry tax revenue reflects increased room rates at most Carmel motels, hotels and inns. The city gets an eight percent room tax.

Figures from the Monterey Peninsula Motel Hotel Guide and Guide to Carmel-by-the-Sea indicated room prices have gone up 10 percent and more in a year.

The tourist guides said rates a year ago at the Pine Inn began at $28, while this year prices start at $39. The Holland Court Inn rooms, which started at $22 a year ago, now begin at $26.

Mrs. Chamberlin estimated that the occupancy rate in Carmel is 97 percent. On weekends, she said, the rooms are full.

Though the scales weighing sales tax and hostelry revenue are uneven, Bajari said when preparing revenue projections, "we weigh the recession and inflation parameters and decide what is reasonable."

Bajari said revenue estimates were based on receipts from the year before. The city staff projected a five percent increase in sales and hostelry tax revenue, according to Bajari.

Bajari said, "We're after some sort of ballpark figure that is reasonable. We could say we're going to have a gangbuster year or we're going to have a recession and we'll be down eight percent.

"If we came in and said revenues would be only $850,000, they'd (the City Council) say, 'whose crystal ball are you looking at?'"

County funds are short

Budget pinches Carmel library

By JOANNE HODGEN

THE MONTEREY County budget squeeze will leave Harrison Memorial Library $7,000 short in its operating budget for fiscal 1980-81.

The library board voted to accept the budget contract in concept despite the county's inability to fulfill funding requests when it met Tuesday, Nov. 18.

In a memo to the board, Librarian Jo Childers said the library will receive $148,742 from the county.

The City of Carmel apportioned $193,925 for the library during budget sessions in August and September. Because the library serves Carmel and county residents, operating costs are shared.

The library board originally asked the county to provide $167,000 towards its operating budget, according to Mrs. Childers.

When the county ignored the library's budget requests, the board threatened to cut off services to county patrons Jan. 1 unless the county provided a contract by Dec. 1.

BOARD PRESIDENT Patricia Faul said County Administrator Richard Andrews apologized for the delay and met with her and Treasurer Walter Gorey Friday, Nov. 14 to finalize a contract.

She said, "We learned the county does not have enough in the budget to pay us our fair share. For the first time in history they don't have the money."

Mrs. Childers said later that the county slashed 26 percent from its portion of the budget in 1978 after the passage of Proposition 13.

Gorey said, "I let them know they were really embarrassing this board" by informing its members of the cut after the operating budget was adopted.

The $19,000 deficit left by the county will be partially met by the transfer of $12,000 in the capital outlay portion of the budget to the operating budget, according to Gorey.

The city had allocated $12,000 for a book security system as a one-time capital outlay.

Carmel City Administrator Doug Peterson said later that advance approval by the City Council of transfers from one category of the budget to another is required of all other city departments.

The library, however, must gain prior approval from the library board instead of the City Council since it governs that department. The board in turn must notify the council of its actions, but does not need approval, Peterson said.

According to Mrs. Childers, the county first proposed a contract of $136,232, the same amount provided during fiscal 1979-80.

Harrison Memorial Library.

That amount was increased, she said, when funds earmarked for a county inter-library study were freed by the County Board of Supervisors. Mrs. Childers said about $30,000 was then distributed among county libraries.

The county will now finance the study with state funds, she said. The purpose of the study, which will cost $20,000 to $40,000, is to determine the most economical approach to county library services.

Deleted from this year's contract with the county was the repair and renovation payment included in the county obligation each year, according to Mrs. Childers.

The board agreed to inform the county that the payments will be deferred until fiscal 1981-82, not deleted.

THE LIBRARY BOARD also discussed a project to repair floor supports in the reference room.

The city agreed to pay half of the projected $10,000 costs about six months ago, Gorey said.

Mrs. Faul said the city "assumed responsibility for awarding contracts and it hasn't been done."

Gorey said a carpenters' strike about six months ago delayed city action.

The board voted 5-0 to write the city administrator and personally contact him to ask that a contract be pursued.

bags and towels," Mrs. Slayton said.

MEAL-PLANNING problems are compounded and multiplied by the sheer number of people, though she prepares the menus in advance.

Last year, she said, they began shopping two weeks ahead of time, but procrastinated this time around.

They even printed a menu last year which stated: "Meals will be served whenever. Please be on time."

WHAT IS NEEDED to feed 24 hungry people Thanksgiving dinner?

Two 18-pound turkeys, five pounds of potatoes, the makings for giblet gravy, pounds of fresh carrots and peas, four cans of cranberry sauce, dozens of rolls, fruit for salad, pumpkin pie filling, lots of whipped cream, four bottles of sparkling cider, 1½ cases of champagne, four gallons of wine and a keg of beer are needed, Mrs. Slayton noted.

She estimated the Thanksgiving dinner bill will total $150 to $175 this year.

Baking, chopping, basting and stirring are coordinated Thanksgiving day so a gathering of three generations can sit down together.

Though pies are baked ahead of time, the food preparation does not begin until Thanksgiving morning.

"We have two stoves, two ovens, two refrigerators and a microwave oven. Counter space is the biggest problem," Mrs. Slayton lamented. "We try to cook ahead of time that day, then throw it in the microwave.

"My husband is in charge of turkey and dressing a la Vincent Price.

"Then we have to have a schedule for basting the turkeys. Everybody takes a turn and marks off when they basted last."

Pat Slayton and daughter, Elise Abell, engineer the first phase of preparing for Thanksgiving dinner for 24.

BESIDES BAKING activities, the Slaytons spend the day watching "a lot of football," while others go jogging or wander through town.

"There isn't a lot of time to talk until after dinner. Then everyone gets a second wind and starts a charades game," Mrs. Slayton said. Last year it was "riotous."

DISHES may be stacked to the ceiling, Mrs. Slayton said, but last year "I don't think I had to wash a dish. The girls were in the kitchen and got the boys to do dishes, too."

Thanksgiving is Mrs. Slayton's favorite holiday.

"It's all the good things without the Christmas hassles. And the kids enjoy being together so much. They're all very close," she said.

BY SUNDAY, she said everyone will have returned home, leaving the Slayton household very empty.

How did they feel last year?

"Relieved," Mrs. Slayton said.

"My husband and I sat down, propped our feet up and enjoyed the fond memories and quiet."

Variance sought to build cabin

By JOANNE HODGEN

AN APPLICATION from City Councilman Howard Brunn asking for approval of a proposed caretaker's cabin behind his home was continued by the Carmel Planning Commission when it met Wednesday, Nov. 19, during its Board of Adjustments session.

Brunn's home, on the east side of Junipero between Rio Road and Ridgewood, is in the annexed residential district of Carmel. Planning decisions are based on the Monterey County code in effect when the area was annexed to Carmel.

The application asks for a variance to allow servants' quarters with or without a kitchen in the residential district.

Earlier, Brunn said the cabin would be for his son.

Commissioner John Logan said the plans submitted initially were not dimensioned. The drawings were resubmitted, he said, but too late for review by the Land Use Committee.

The application will be reconsidered at the Planning Commission meeting Dec. 17.

THE BOARD of Adjustments approved the application for a variance submitted by Marguerite MacLaughlin of the west side of San Antonio north of Ninth Avenue to allow a garage to be built in the front and side yard setbacks of her property. The building designer was Planning Commission Chairman Robert Stephenson, who excused himself from voting on the issue.

In a letter to the Planning Commission and Planning Director Bob Griggs, Stephenson stated that the garage was constructed with a zero setback from the front. "Subsequent street grading and paving work executed by the city," he said, "has rendered the garage to be inefficacious for its intended function . . ."

Griggs said the existing building encroaches on setbacks, making it nonconforming. "They're asking for an additional nonconformity and then to make it legal," he said.

The old garage, which has been used for storage for several years, cannot be converted into a habitable area under city code, Griggs said.

The commission voted 5-1 to approve the variance.

Commissioner Arthur Mertens, contending that it would increase the nonconformity with two garages facing the street, dissented.

What's miserable, depressing?

DESPITE a 3½-hour session, the Carmel Planning Commission still found time for a few laughs when it met Wednesday, Nov. 19.

Chairman Robert Stephenson submitted an application requesting permission to paint the exterior of his office on the east side of San Carlos between Fourth and Fifth.

Stephenson said he could vote on the issue because City Attorney George Brehmer said it was not a conflict of interest.

The agenda stated that the Design Review Committee recommended approval of the "change of exterior of building color from a miserable, depressing, uninteresting dark grey to a bright, sprightly tan with sparkling white trim."

However, Commissioner Sandy Swain said in keeping with commission policy, "The committee does not move approval because it doesn't like anything that sparkles in Carmel."

City Councilman Mike Brown, who was unable to attend the meeting, forwarded a memo protesting the change in color.

The memo stated that it "came to my attention that miserable, depressing, uninteresting dark grey colors are on the endangered list."

Despite the protest, the commissioners approved the application 7-0.

Sierra Club has a plan for tankers

THE SIERRA CLUB has asked Pacific Gas and Electric Co. to overhaul the tanker terminal at its Moss Landing power plant.

Rod Holmgren, chairman of the Moss Landing Task Force for Carmel's Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club, presented the detailed request to PG&E in a letter Nov. 10.

The Task Force asks that PG&E use equipment it bought for building a larger terminal to overhaul the existing one, which pipes oil and natural gas from large tankers to the power plant.

PG&E announced last week that it abandoned its plan to build a larger terminal to handle 90,000-ton tankers instead of 50,000-ton tankers.

Holmgren suggested in his letter that PG&E use pumps, lines and other equipment it intended for the new terminal to overhaul the existing facility.

He noted that at public hearings earlier this year, PG&E spokesmen admitted that the terminal's moorings need an overhaul. Since PG&E already has the equipment, Holmgren suggested, "A complete overhaul of the present terminal would be relatively cheap."

Ron Rutkowski, public information officer for PG&E, said last week that any decision to overhaul the terminal would hinge on engineering studies yet to be conducted.

He said the company had just decided not to refile its application or go to court to fight the Army Corps of Engieners' denial for the larger terminal.

The Corps in June rejected PG&E's plan to allow 90,000-ton tankers into the terminal; the ruling came after lengthy public hearings and a strongly contested battle in which opponents cited the danger of large oil spills from the larger tankers.

Rutkowski acknowledged that hardware had been bought for building the larger terminal, but he said only some of it could be used to overhaul the existing facility. He said the company intends to use some of it at other facilities and sell the rest back to suppliers.

"To use all of the hardware on the Moss Landing facility would not be cost-effective," he insisted.

Holmgren maintained in his letter to PG&E that it has the equipment to replace the existing 24-inch pipeline with 36-inch pipe, and to install new pumps and heaters.

The present facility was built in 1949 when welding and other building technology were not as good as today, he noted.

Holmgren also asked that PG&E conduct periodic underwater inspections of the pipeline to insure against leaks.

Valley turkeys are gone

By STEVE HELLMAN

HUNTERS HOPING to bag a wild bird for the Thanksgiving table can find quail but no wild turkey or pheasant in Carmel Valley.

The wild turkey, an elusive and rarely caught bird, can be found only in southern portions of Monterey County and stalking it requires unusual skills, according to Bruce Elliot, field supervisor for the state Fish and Game Department's local office.

Pheasant are not found in Monterey County, Elliot added.

The hunting season for quail is October to Jan. 25 in the area that includes Carmel Valley, he noted.

While hunting and discharge of firearms are prohibited by county ordinance in almost all of the Carmel Valley, areas are open to quail hunting on the ridges and hills behind the Valley extending into Los Padres National Forest, he said.

Hunters should be aware, however, that much of the land around the Valley is private property and a hunter needs written permission from the owner, Elliot warned.

He added, "You'd have to shoot a lot of quail to provide for a Thanksgiving meal."

Limit for the pigeon-size bird is 10 a day and no more than 20 in possession if the hunter has been out for more than a day.

Only six wild turkeys were reported taken last year in Monterey County during the Nov. 1-30 and spring seasons. The birds are hunted primarily in the rugged Plaskett Ridge area south of Nacimiento Summit Road, he said.

Introduced into the county 30 years ago, wild turkeys were last seen in Carmel Valley in the early 1960s, Elliot said.

"We get reports from time to time of wild turkeys in Carmel Valley," he said, "but they're just domestic turkeys that escaped into the wild and return."

The turkey's domestic and wild cousins look alike, although the wild version is larger and more highly-colored, with brown on the tips of the features instead of white, he said.

Like the domestic turkey, the wild version is primarily black with a featherless red head and blue neck, Elliot said. It has wattles on the side of the head, and the telltale turkey dewlap hanging from its chin, he added. The gobbler will reach 20 pounds, the hens 12 to 15 pounds, Elliot said.

The wild turkey forages on the ground during the day. Acorns are a major part of its diet; it rests at night in the tops of pine trees, Elliot said.

"They're a very difficult bird to catch," he said. "They're very wary. For birds, they are exceptionally sharp in detecting danger."

Hunting the wild turkey is a demanding sport with few material rewards, Elliot said. Bag and possession limit is two birds of either sex per season, and shooting hours are sunrise to one-half hour after sunset.

The hunter uses a "chalkbox" to call the bird; it consists of a piece of chalk rubbed against the cedar lid to mimic the high-pitched yelp of the hen, Elliot said.

"It's quite a skill," he said. "It takes a lot of looking and knowing your birds well.

"There's a lot more looking than shooting."

Carmel River erosion

Property owners sue Cal-Am

A $2.8 MILLION LAWSUIT was filed last week by property owners along the Carmel River blaming California-American Water Co. for massive erosion.

Alexander Henson of Carmel Valley filed the suit in Monterey County Superior Court on behalf of 10 property owners in the Schulte Road Bridge area.

The suit, filed on the eve of Cal-Am's plan to put four more wells in the Valley, claims that the company over-pumped its series of wells along the river, causing the groundwater to drop too low to support riverbank vegetation.

The death of vegetation which anchors the riverbanks led to erosion of the property owners' land last February and March, the suit charges. The property owners also claim that Cal-Am was aware of the danger to the vegetation, yet continued to pump without providing above-ground irrigation.

The suit asks that Cal-Am compensate the property owners for repairs, diminished property values and personal injuries. Those asking relief are: Gunnar and Eleonore Reimers, $520,000; Mary Shorey, $55,000; Zobel Investments Inc., $320,000; Logar Inc., $620,000; Patrick J. and Evelyn D. Parker, $320,000; Bill C. and Dorothy D. Dick, $420,000, and Doris A. Sanderson, $370,000.

Because of Cal-Am's alleged knowledge of the danger to vegetation which it did not seek to guard against, the suit asks for $200,000 in punitive damages to be divided among the property owners.

Henson said the suit would be aided by the fact that Cal-Am has agreed to irrigate around the four new wells it wants to put in the lower Valley.

"Everyone seems to agree that Cal-Am has to provide stream-side irrigation for the four wells, so it's apparent they should have provided it for their other wells," he said.

While Cal-Am has maintained that the 1976-77 drought caused the death of the vegetation, Henson said there is evidence that after the 1959-61 drought vegetation did not suffer the same losses as in recent years.

"The riverbanks remained stable until 1969, which is after the pumps went in," Henson said.

The more recent drought contributed to the killing of vegetation, Henson conceded, but he maintained that it was in combination with Cal-Am's well-pumping that the major erosion was caused.

She places substitute mothers

By FLORENCE MASON

business by-the-sea

MOTHERS-IN-DEED INC.
Alice Uehling

If Kramer (as in Kramer vs. Kramer) had had an educated woman with managerial experience to take over his home when his wife left, he wouldn't have lost his job!

That's the contention of Alice Uehling, who has recently opened an unusual business in Carmel.

Mothers-In-Deed places educated women who have been teachers, nurses and the like into motherless homes. Mrs. Uehling emphasizes that they are not housekeepers; they do not do heavy cleaning. The situation is the same as if there were a mother in the home who has a cleaning woman once a week.

The women working out of this business in the Carmel Rancho area (the new office building on Via Nona Marie Road next to the post office) will do the cooking, because that is what most mothers do, according to Mrs. Uehling. They will also attend PTA meetings and in some cases start or work with Scout troops. Mostly, they are just there — when the children come home from school, in the evenings, in the summer.

These substitute mothers usually live in, although some live in their own homes and go to their assignments early in the morning, staying until the parent comes home. Most are "permanent" (Mrs. Uehling has placed more than 500 in that category), but she also places temporary mother substitutes — "thousands." The service is available not only for single male parents, but also for single women, especially those who may have to be away for an extended period.

This service began in the Washington, D.C., area. The need there was to offer help to busy government officials and diplomats. The business grew rapidly because of the increasing number of single fathers gaining custody of one or more children. After Mrs. Uehling was interviewed by Barbara Walters on the Today show about six years ago, she began placing workers all over the country.

Mrs. Uehling has had that first office — in Alexandria, Va. — for nine years, and she opened a branch office in San Diego earlier this year. Expanding to Carmel came naturally as she had owned a home here for 10 years, renting it to others while she was busy in the East. Now she has branch managers for the other offices and is happily ensconced in her own home on 15th Avenue in Carmel.

The widow of a Navy officer, she had been a substitute mother in five homes before starting her own business. She has three grown sons and three grandchildren and describes herself as a tennis buff.

Many people think the name of the company is "Mothers-In-Need," but Mrs. Uehling explains that it is her clients who are in need; employees of the company are mothers, indeed. There is no agency fee to the substitute mother; only the client in the motherless home pays for the service. As administrator, Mrs. Uehling said she does not take a salary, but puts all the profits back into the business.

Mrs. Uehling is hiring a young woman to help her in the Carmel office so she will be free to go to Virginia in the summer to look after things there.

She points out that her workers have one distinct advantage over "natural" mothers: They do not work on weekends.

COTTAGE OF SWEETS
Lanny and Linda Rose

The Cottage of Sweets has been on Ocean Avenue between Lincoln and Monte Verde more than 20 years.

New owners Lanny and Linda Rose count their stay in weeks. However, they are enthusiastic about this business venture — their first — and it is important to them that they have become part of the Carmel business scene.

The Roses had been coming to Carmel as tourists, especially to mark each wedding anniversary. Then for some time they concentrated on watching for a business opportunity, one that would offer them a chance to work together. When the Cottage of Sweets went on the market they immediately recognized it as the opportunity they had been waiting for. That ended Rose's plans to continue his education at San Jose State.

The store's history delights Rose, 26. "Did you know that tickets used to be sold here for the theater that was behind us?" he asked. However, the store's customary lines of candy will be continued by the new owners. That means English imports, chocolates and small gifts. The Roses are looking forward to seeing what the previous owner ordered for Christmas; the special items will probably include wreaths of wrapped candies that were featured last year (they came with scissors attached to make it easy to clip off a tidbit).

Rose spent four years in the Navy and, while stationed at Moffett Field, met Linda at church. Now the Roses live on Walker Avenue near Carmel Point. It is close enough that their 2½-year-old son, Shawn, can make use of River School's playground.

Their common and abiding interest is in raising a family; the Cottage of Sweets is a means to that end and gives them their long-sought opportunity to work together.

It's Highway 1 plus baboons

By JERRY FOOTE

"THE GARDEN ROUTE" is the name of the highway along the coast of South Africa between East London and Capetown.

It passes through miles of marvelous scenery which contain a large variety of African flora.

In some ways it is like our Highway 1 south of Carmel, with the additions of elephants, ostriches and baboons. For train enthusiasts there is the Apple Express, a narrow-gauge steam train which runs from Port Elizabeth to Avontuur.

We followed that route by bus, leaving Port Elizabeth on the way west to Capetown. Oddly enough, that part of the trip began with a walk under a clump of thriving Monterey Cypress in downtown Port Elizabeth. Also thriving nearby were dense thickets of Port Jackson willow, Acacia cyanophylla, which was introduced from Australia to help control erosion along the coast. Like pampas grass, it has now taken over large areas, crowding out native vegetation, and seems impossible to eradicate. I hope California will never be so afflicted.

Our bus gradually became a second home for the 20 members of the tour. Each occupant staked out his territory and furnished it with belongings he considered essential to life. Cameras were everywhere; maps, bird guides, botanical reference books, binoculars, snacks and shopping bags full of souvenirs and flower specimens. We grew more motley with each passing day. Our descent at hotels can best be described as reminiscent of Caesar's legions unloading their impedimenta.

As we drove through the countryside we saw Watsonias growing everywhere. Those showy flowers belong to the iris family, but look very much like gladiolus.

The Watsonia beatricis, an evergreen type, can be grown here on the Peninsula, although it requires a good deal of water. The W. pyramidata is a fine plant, but is deciduous, requiring careful placement in the flower border to allow for its dying down after blooming.

At times, Bob Ornduff, our spiritual director, would stop the bus to point out a rare plant or tree. That was in contrast to his usual habit of identifying obscure plants by the roadside as we went by at 50 mph — a losing battle for the puzzled amateur. We would emerge and clamber over fences, ditches and rocks while passersby craned to find the reason for such behavior.

One very exciting lesson was an examination of recently burned-over ground. Dozens of new plants had germinated there in response to the fire as they do here in California after forest fires.

In one small area I found moraea, oxalis, homeria (a beautiful coral bulb), scabiosa, calla lily, wild forget-me-not, white creeping mallow, brunsvigia, albuca and the night-flowering hesperantha. Nature truly does abhor a botanical vacuum.

ALONG THE WAY we stopped at a series of botanic gardens: the Robberg Native Reserve at Plettenberg Bay, the Caledon Municipality Wildflower Preserve, the Fernkloof Nature Reserve at Hermanus and the Harold Porter Botanical Reserve at Betty's Bay.

Out of all the beautiful plants on display, several stand out in my memory. I hope to grow some of the following species in my own garden, and would ask any of my readers who have knowledge of them to help me locate them.

1. Nymania capensis (Klapperbos). The rosy, "Chinese lantern" bloom is very unusual. The plant is excellent for dry, alkaline soils and can withstand cold winters.
2. Aristea ecklomii and A. thyrsiflora. Members of the iridacae family, they have dark lavender bloom.
3. Ursinia sericea. This plant has a yellow flower and lacy gray foliage similar to Euryops.
4. Helichrysum vestitum. It is a felted everlasting with silvery white, papery flowers. It is rare even in South Africa.
5. Virgilia divaricata (Keurboom). It is a lovely tree which has sweetly scented pinkish lavender flowers and graceful foliage. It is fast growing, does not tolerate wind well, but withstands drought and frost after it is established.

In so short an article it is impossible to give a complete accounting of all the riches of the garden route. It is filled with marvelous gorges, waterfalls, forests of witels and yellowwoods, mountains falling down into lovely curved bays where sperm whales calve, rivers dressed in ferns and clivia, ericas and leucospermums in masses.

For those of us who were fortunate to see it, the route lived up to its reputation as a passage through one of the great floral kingdoms of the world.

Toll proposed on Highway 1

CONTROLLED ACCESS and a toll were proposed for Highway 1 through Big Sur last week by the Monterey County Planning Commission.

The commissioners, meeting in special session to discuss the proposed Local Coastal Program for Big Sur, voted 5-3 to support establishment of restrictions on traffic through the heavily-used tourist area.

A majority of the commissioners agreed that traffic congestion through Big Sur is already serious enough to warrant regulation.

A toll was recommended for nonresidents of the county to relieve some of the congestion and to provide revenue for paving turn-outs to further ease the traffic flows.

The restrictions on traffic, which would require state laws to implement, would also include limits on the movement of recreational vehicles during peak months.

The county would give the state Legislature two years to improve traffic conditions on Highway 1 through Big Sur, and if the state fails to implement measures, the county would ban all further residential development in Big Sur.

The commissioners also supported easing zoning restrictions from the proposed minimum 320-acre building density to a minimum 40-acre density.

The commission will resume its deliberations on the Big Sur plan Dec. 10. Still to be discussed is the major issue of low- and moderate-income housing in the Big Sur area.

Unpaid rent

Hidden Valley plans to buy its property

By STEVE HELLMAN

SEEKING TO END a dispute over $75,000 in unpaid rent and to secure a permanent home for itself, the Hidden Valley Music Seminars intends to buy the property it occupies near Carmel Valley Village.

Peter T. Meckel, general manager of Hidden Valley, said last week that an agreement in principle had been reached with the owner, Bruce Church Inc. Meckel said the preliminary agreement would grant Hidden Valley a five-year option to buy the land that it has leased for eight years.

Bruce Church Inc., a large agricultural business in the Salinas Valley, filed a lawsuit earlier this year seeking $75,000 in unpaid rent from Hidden Valley; the suit was later withdrawn. A second suit was filed in Monterey County Superior Court this month asking the non-profit art and music institute to vacate the premises.

Meckel said the second lawsuit was meant only to pressure Hidden Valley to take action on the unpaid rent. He indicated that the suit would probably be withdrawn as soon as final details are hammered out with representatives of Bruce Church Inc. over purchase of the land.

Bruce Church and representatives of the company were unavailable for comment.

The agreement in principle that has been negotiated, Meckel said, would allow Hidden Valley to make a $75,000 immediate payment, allowing it to extinguish all obligations to Bruce Church Inc. and to secure a five-year option on the property.

The land is 7.2 acres, with a theater, office, dance studio, dormitory and lounge. Meckel said the purchase price would be $1.8 million. Meckel said the agreement would allow Hidden Valley to operate on the premises under a lease for the interim five years while it is purchasing the land.

A major fund-raising drive was started in October, he said, to collect $75,000 for the down payment. Grant applications had also been filed with several major West Coast foundations, he added.

"Campaign 20," named for Hidden Valley's 20th continuous year of operation by 1983, will seek to raise the $1.8 million for the complete purchase, Meckel said.

He said Hidden Valley's location one-half mile west of Carmel Valley Village and south of Carmel Valley Road has been ideal.

"We love the location. We've tailored it to our needs," he said.

Asked why Hidden Valley failed to pay its rent during the first three years at the location, Meckel said, "We built the dormitory instead."

Hidden Valley, meanwhile, will take a one-year hiatus in its opera productions, Meckel said, resuming the program in January 1982.

Meckel said program plans for 1981 will be announced soon.

Seastrand recount is due

A RECOUNT of ballots in the state 17th Senate District race between Republican Eric Seastrand and Democrat Henry Mello will take about another week.

Seastrand, who lost to Mello by 834 votes in the Nov. 4 election, requested the recount last week. He noted that a 0.3 percent shift in the more than 240,000 votes cast could change the election results.

The recount is being conducted in Monterey, San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara and Santa Cruz counties. It will cost Seastrand about $7,000.

"We are also looking into not yet fully substantiated reports of voter registration irregularities in the northern portion of the Senate District," Seastrand said.

Mello, of Watsonville, won his greatest margin of votes in Santa Cruz County, and Seastrand said he is investigating allegations of double registrations and of persons voting where they did not reside in that county.

Farr resigns as supervisor

MONTEREY COUNTY Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel has resigned effective Dec. 1 to take his new post as the state's 28th District assemblyman.

Farr's term as Fifth District supervisor does not expire until January, but he had to step down early to be sworn into the state post Dec. 1.

Supervisor-elect William Peters of Carmel Valley, meanwhile, is awaiting word from Gov. Brown on Farr's request that Peters be appointed to fill the Fifth District vacancy.

Peters is scheduled to take office as supervisor Jan. 6, after winning the post in the Nov. 4 election. He said last week that he had not yet received word from the governor on an early appointment.

It is conceivable, Peters said, that if his appointment is approved by the governor, it might not be until sometime after Dec. 1 when Farr leaves.

"The Brown administration is known to be very methodical in its appointments. I'm sure they're checking everything out," Peters said.

PETERS ACKNOWLEDGED that a lawsuit filed against him by District Attorney William Curtis, while not yet resolved, could have political repercussions that would hamper his appointment.

The civil lawsuit filed a week before the Nov. 4 election accuses Peters of failing to disclose his participation in a real estate partnership and a free membership in the Carmel Valley Ranch Tennis Club while serving as a county planning commissioner.

Farr said he requested the early appointment of Peters so the Fifth District would be represented during board discussion of the proposed Local Coastal Program for Big Sur.

Holiday season gets into its 'official' full swing

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

HAPPY THANKSGIVING!

The holiday season is truly upon us, and Carmelites are opening their doors to friends and family members arriving from around the world to share in the traditional Thanksgiving feast.

It's a perfect time to take a few days off and walk the beach or read a good book before gearing up for the Christmas galas that are beginning to jam the social calendar.

BRETT WESTON

The who's who in Carmel turned out en masse Nov. 15 for the book-signing party honoring Brett Weston of Carmel Valley on the publication of his new book, Brett Weston, Selections From a Life's Work.

The affair was at the Weston Gallery of Carmel, and about 400 people dropped by to chat with the famous photographer and add his very beautiful book to their collections.

Another famous photographer, Ansel Adams of Carmel Highlands, was there to congratulate Brett and chat with guests. Ansel, by the way, is feeling great these days and is getting ready for his own book signing (Eloquent Light), which will be held at the Weston Gallery on Dec. 7.

Brett's very close friends, Rosario and Katie-Clare Mazzeo, were also there. Rosario and Katie are well known for their concert work — Katy is a pianist and Rosario a clarinetist — he was also manager and head clarinetist of the Boston Symphony for many years.

The Weston family was also present in full force, including Maggie (owner of the gallery); Brett's brother, Cole, also a famous photographer; Brett's daughter, Erica, and Cole's children, daughter Cara and son Kim.

Brett signed about 250 books for guests who enjoyed red and white wine and a variety of cheeses and crackers. After the signing Maggie hosted a group of 20 to dinner at the Golden Buddha — with Brett as guest of honor.

Maggie was suffering a bit of jet lag as she had just returned from a three-week trip to Europe the previous night. Along with her associate, Russell Anderson, their trip included such fascinating places as London, Paris and New York.

While in London, they enjoyed a few plays and saw clients, including the Victorian Albert Museum — and then it was on to Paris to buy materials and spend a weekend with friends at their beautiful 16th century mansion.

Then on to New York for a 10-day business trip with time off to see some of the Broadway shows, visit friends and dine at fabulous restaurants before heading home to Carmel — for Brett's party!

Now Maggie can take a bit of a break, but brother-in-law Brett is planning to concentrate on photographing again — including trips around the country and to Hawaii, where he has a second home.

EASY LIVIN'

The lull before the storm!

It was just a few days before Thanksgiving and Ric and Joanne Carver were a bit bored so they decided to invite Dennis and Pat Hart and Greg Cellitti and Pam Mason over for a barbecue and a bit of chit-chat.

Ric, who loves to cook, concocted his own special mixture to marinate the steaks — and they turned out to be quite delicious — along with salads, vegies and other good things.

Ric, who is the chairman of the public relations committee of the Carmel Business Association, said his committee of five has been putting in mucho hours preparing for the upcoming Sounds of Christmas in Carmel — an annual event which delights Carmelites because, along with the entertainment, they can also shop at night!

The festivities will continue for two weeks beginning Dec. 5 with the tree-lighting ceremony. The Carmel Presbyterian Church choir will perform at the entrance to Carmel Plaza at 6:30 p.m., and at 7:30 the Cypressaires Chorus will sing on the steps of the library. Strolling musicians will be around town, as will various ethnic groups who will sing in their native language.

Helping Ric with all the details are Whit Taylor, Rosemary Blackstone, Susan Brown and Bill Bekker — also professionals Bill and Dorothy Nye.

FIVE GENERATIONS OF FLANSBURGS

George Flansburg of Carmel has known great happiness and great sadness the past couple of weeks.

On July 11, George's granddaughter, Dawn Borden of Bakersfield, made him a great-grandfather, with the birth of her daughter, Kimberly Ann.

George and his daughter, Ivena Grudzinski, also of Bakersfield, decided it was a perfect time for the entire family to visit George's mother, Reba Hollar of Claremont, and have a five-generation picture taken.

"Mother was 90 years old, so we were all very excited about taking the picture," said George. "I drove to Bakersfield to

VISITORS

Chuck and Pat Shields, who moved to Carmel from the big island of Hawaii (Kona) last July, are delighted with our nippy weather.

They've also been enjoying a visit from their daughter, Melissa, who still lives on the big island, and their son, Patrick, an exhibiting artist in Westwood.

The Shields have six children, but the only one still at home is Tracy, a senior at Carmel High School and a member of the tennis team.

Pat, who enjoys working out at Maggie Eastwood's Transitions Studio, said she is enjoying getting to know the town and all the friendly Carmelites.

Chuck is retired, but keeps involved in the investment business.

Welcome, newcomers!

DEL MESA CARMEL BIRTHDAY PARTY

Residents of Del Mesa Carmel and their houseguests celebrated their 13th birthday party with cocktails and a sumptuous buffet Nov. 15.

The festive party theme included a zillion balloons and colorful confetti — and popcorn made by Helen Hood and Kay Vaughn for the cocktail hour.

Dinner included a salad bar, prime rib, chicken and won ton — served by waiters dressed as happy clowns.

Co-chairing the event were Charles and Dene Gallant and James and Cyrilla Thornton, who were helped by Mrs. George (Kay) Vaughn and Mrs. Manley (Helen) Hood.

The decorations were planned by Monique LeDeaux.

Newcomb and Betty Deihl and John and Lib Adams head up all the social events at Del Mesa — and Betty said that the next event will be a bus trip to a Stanford shopping area and the Allied Arts in Palo Alto Dec. 2.

The next real biggie will be the Christmas program Dec. 14.

HANUKKAH ART FESTIVAL

Deborah Friend of Carmel is a very busy woman these days.

She recently celebrated the anniversary of her first year in the area — by flying home to New York for a month visit.

"I couldn't wait to get back home to Carmel," said Deborah. "The hustle-bustle of New York just isn't my cup of tea anymore."

Deborah, who owns the Seven Arts Gallery in the San Carlos Hotel, has also made short business trips to Los Angeles and San Francisco this past week — and now she's getting ready to present a Hanukkah Art Festival at Congregation Beth Israel, which will be held from noon to 6 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 7.

If happiness is staying busy — then Deborah is definitely a happy person!

ROBIN HOME FOR THANKSGIVING

Robin Thompson, who grew up in the Carmel-Pebble Beach area, is home for the Thanksgiving holiday — and is walking on air about her upcoming marriage to Steve Nygaard Dec. 28.

Robin was recently hosted to two bridal showers by her many friends in the area. The first was held at the Carmel home of the Rev. Bill and Chris Welch. Co-host for the party was Mrs. Ernest (Pat) Zanetta.

Guests were 20 of Robin's friends from the Carmel Presbyterian Church, where Robin was very active in Young Life. The women enjoyed coffee, tea and a special chocolate and coffee dessert.

The second party was a bridal brunch given by Ted and Dana Calhoon at their Pebble Beach home. The guests were asked to bring gifts for both Robin and Steve, but since the bridegroom-to-be couldn't attend, Robin's father, Rabun Thompson Jr., sat in for him.

The couple met at the University of California in Chico where Robin is majoring in religious studies and Steve in business. Steve is also a marathon runner and his goal is to run in the Olympics.

PI BETA PHI ALUMNAE

The Pi Beta Phi Alumnae Club of the Monterey Peninsula is having its annual pre-Christmas buffet luncheon and meeting on Saturday, Dec. 6.

The affair will be held at the Holiday Inn, Rio Road and Highway 1 in Carmel, starting at noon.

Slides featuring the group's craft center in Arrowmont will be shown and samples of the crafts displayed for Christmas buying. All Pi Phis in the area are invited.

For reservations, call Marietta Tracy at 659-3046 or Nina Craig at 624-7823.

THE YOUNG PRESIDENTS

The Young Presidents Organization held their annual conference at the Pebble Beach Lodge last week and one of those attending the big dinner-dance Nov. 16 was Michael Robbins.

Mike (an old school chum of President Carter) who owns Spring Mountain Winery in St. Helena, said about 360 members (including wives) attended the affair.

"It's a very interesting group as it's comprised of presidents of corporations who all made it before age 40," said Mike.

While in town, Mike also lunched with long-time friends Eloise and Andy Kozak and commissioned Andy to do some wildlife paintings for his winery.

RESIDENTS WILL NAME LOCAL THEATER

"What's in a name?" asked Shakespeare.

There's more in a name than he ever thought of, judging from the larger number of contributions received in the contest started this week for a new name for the Golden Bough Theater.

Feeling that Carmel should select its own name for the theater, David J. Bolton, who is with the Monterey Theater company that has taken the local showhouse, is sponsoring the contest together with the Pine Cone. The name of the Golden Bough cannot be used due to a clause in the contract signed by Bolton with Edward Kuster, the owner of the theater.

FOREST FIRE LOSSES FOR MONTEREY COUNTY

Monterey County lost $120,000 worth of watershed during the 1930 fire season, according to a compilation of reports in the office of State Ranger Herbert Phelps.

In addition to this, cattlemen lost $545 in burned over range lands.

TV CABLES MAY COME OUT OF HIDING

At its regular meeting Wednesday evening, the council will vote on the ordinance repealing the law which requires the cable television company to place its transformers underground.

If the alarm goes as it has in the preliminary balloting, the ordinance will pass, 3-2, and the alarm corporation will be allowed to dig up its transformer boxes, 28 in number with a total of 44 in sight, and stand them on the public streets and paths throughout the residence district.

TEA POT TRANSPORTATION?

A small but significant number of visitors, residents and businessmen are not opposed to the idea of changing Carmel. They usually point out that there are plenty of ways Carmel may be improved and without changing its charm and character.

Disneyland has probably inspired more recommendations for improving Carmel's transportation than all other places in the world combined.

Peripheral railroads, monorails, moving sidewalks, flying teacups, covered wagon taxis, jitney tram trains, hansom carriages, stage coaches and a flock of other park-and-ride mass movement systems all seem to have the Disneyland flavor.

No doubt about it . . . each of the above is a fine solution to our beautifully congested streets. Put up a line of flying teapots and we won't have to worry long about congested streets.

Development may get new TV cable

By STEVE HELLMAN

RESIDENTS IN RANCHO TIERRA GRANDE could have a rebuilt cable TV system by the end of the year.

Kenneth Ruggles, president of the Rancho Tierra Garnde Homeowners Association, said last week that a faulty section of the system's main trunkline had been repaired and other work to modernize the system was to be completed within two months.

The new cable system, which is owned and operated by the homeowners association, will provide more channels and be designed to link up with commercial satellite broadcasts, Ruggles said.

The faulty section of the trunkline that had been deemed a fire hazard by the Fire Department was replaced, Ruggles said, and passed inspection Nov. 17.

THE HOMEOWNERS Association, meanwhile, has applied to Monterey County for approval of increased subscriber rates to offset the rebuilding costs.

The county Board of Supervisors was scheduled Nov. 25 to consider the rate increases.

The monthly subscriber rate would increase from $7 to $10, and the new connection fee would increase from $12 to $25. While there had been no fee for reconnections, the association requested a $25 fee for reconnecting subscribers who for either non-payment of bills or other reasons had been disconnected.

The new rates would also include a one-time capital charge of $33 to finance the down payment for the major repairs. That charge would be collected for each building site only once, regardless of whether the home or lot changes hands.

Repair of the cable system was approved in October after the supervisors decided to allow the homeowners association to retain its franchise license. The decision had capped a bitter, six-month battle between residents of the subdivision over whether the homeowners association should keep the system or sell it to a commercial company.

David Hughes, who had been a leading opponent of the homeowners association keeping the cable system, suggested in a letter to Ruggles Oct. 31 that since it was keeping the system it should be rebuilt to accept commercial signals.

Ruggles said last week that it was the association's intent all along to incorporate that flexibility into the new system, providing for satellite signals to greatly increase the range of channels.

Cultural Commission

Library owes rent to Sunset Center

By JOANNE HODGEN

HARRISON MEMORIAL LIBRARY is behind in its rent at Sunset Center.

City Administrator Doug Peterson told the Carmel Cultural Commission at its meeting Monday, Nov. 24, that the city will deduct the $275 due by Dec. 1 from the allocation made by the city to the library.

The library rents Room 14 at Sunset Center for storage space. Rent includes utilities.

Commissioners agreed that because other tenants must pay a portion of the utility bills, it would be unfair to excuse the library from payment.

A related story about Sunset Center is on Page A21.

PETERSON also reported on the status of the proposed terrace at Sunset Center.

Because the terrace must be constructed while no major events are under way, Peterson said the terrace plans will be sent out to contractors for bid in January. He said construction should begin shortly after a bid is accepted.

THE COMMISSION AGREED that a lease with the Carmel Unified School District for the education building at the south end of Sunset Center will be postponed until the city Recreation Commission completes its report.

An incinerator at Sunset Center that is no longer used will be removed and the cost of landscaping the surrounding playground area included in the Sunset Center budget for fiscal 1981-82.

A safety inspector told the Cultural Commission that the playground near the incinerator that is elevated above Mission Street is unsafe. He said a child could fall to the street below if he were unsupervised.

Peterson said the storage area below the Sunset Center diretor's office is being cleaned out to permit the installation of a vault. He said the vault will be used to store city artifacts.

THE COMMISSION will ask the City Council for a meeting Jan. 26 to discuss the allocation of cultural grants.

The council asked the commission to recommend the distribution of $32,000 in cultural grant funds earmarked in the fiscal 1980-81 budget.

The council increased cultural grant allocations in October.

Commission Chairman Jean White said earlier that members were unhappy with the council for increasing the grants after the commission had worked on them. She said commissioners felt their efforts were wasted.

The commission wants the council to set a deadline for cultural grant applications for the next fiscal budget.

THE COMMISSION also voted to evict artists using Studio 19 within 30 days.

The commission agreed that since the conditions of the lease have not been met and because the lease is on a month-to-month basis, notice will be given to vacate.

Tenants at Sunset Center are required to teach structured classes in their field as part of their leases.

Marion Engstrom, assistant to Sunset Director Richard Tyler, said tenants had also installed permanent equipment, including a darkroom, without permission. They will be required to remove all furnishings and equipment not provided for in the lease, she said.

The Children's Experimental Theatre, which leases Forest Theater for classes, will be placed on a month-to-month basis, she said, because of exorbitant utility bills.

The commission agreed that if the bills continue to be high, CET will be required to pay the full amount.

Money pinch continues to squeeze school district

By STEVE HELLMAN

FATE of the extracurricular bus run, money for an academic "decathlon," drug education and picking a replacement for outgoing Trustee Frances Gaver were discussed by the Board of Education of the Carmel schools last week.

Mrs. Gaver, the board's veteran member with seven years service, announced in October that she was resigning to accompany her husband on a four-month professional trip to Belgium.

The board decided to advertise the vacancy, interview candidates and select Mrs. Gaver's replacement by Jan. 13.

Holding an election to fill the seat or offering it to a candidate who ran unsuccessfully in the board election last year were discussed, but the board decided to interview candidates and make a provisional appointment.

The person appointed would serve until November 1981, at which time the term for the seat expires and a regular election is conducted to fill it.

THE LATE AFTERNOON bus run that was provided to extracurricular students on a 10-week trial may be discontinued if ridership declines.

Superintendent William Rand noted that several surveys on ridership on the bus, which stops at Middle School and Carmel High School for a run up the Valley, showed a declining number of students are using it.

Average ridership has slipped from 21 to 18 students, Rand noted, and at the lower figure the cost per pupil per year for the extra bus is $153. The annual cost for the extra bus is $5,496.

The bus run was added after Monterey Peninsula Transit refused to add a stop for its buses at Carmel High School and after parents requested bus service for students in athletics and other after-school activities, Rand noted.

He said, however, that if the ridership continues to decline it would make the cost of the service prohibitive.

The board decided to extend the trial period for the run to Dec. 3, at which time it will consider whether to cancel it.

Trustee Ron Parravano said he was angry at Monterey Peninsula Transit for what he called its "unwillingness to cooperate with us."

Criticizing the transit company's decision to reject the school district's request for a stop at the high school, Parravano said, "In time of tight money we need governmental cooperation, but we're not getting it."

ROBERT HARR, adviser for Carmel High School students participating in the academic decathlon, said $950 had been raised toward the $2,500 needed for a trip.

'In time of tight money we need governmental cooperation, but we're not getting it.'

Carmel's decathlon team won top honors in countywide competition and will represent the county in the statewide competition Dec. 1 in Orange County. Harr said that the Padres Parents Club donated $200, and the Friends of the Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS) $750.

He said two service clubs had pledged $250 each, and he asked the school board to provide $250, which it agreed to do.

RAY GEORGE, student resource officer, reported on his efforts to educate students on drug use and to reduce crime at the schools.

Animated slide shows were presented to elementary school pupils, he said, to explain the dangers of drug use. He said his program in the lower grades also included bicycle safety.

"We want to go through all the grades with a program on the dangers of drugs," George explained.

He said that last year his diversion program kept 130 students from being processed through the county's juvenile justice system. George provides counseling and work experience as alternatives to arrest, court hearings and probation for students caught commiting offenses.

Crime at the schools had dropped 67 percent since his program started last year, George said. He added that the federally-funded program may be canceled next year when his grant expires, unless the county Sheriff's Department provides funding.

Rand complimented George, noting that he often "goes beyond the call of duty" in his counseling and support services to students.

Football season: them, 7; us, 0

By ELIZABETH SARET

THE PACIFIC GROVE BREAKERS could barely generate a ripple against the Carmel High School Padres football team in the first half of their game at Bardason Field, Nov. 15, but they came on like a tidal wave after intermission and left Carmel high and dry with a 36-6 pounding.

As the Breakers withdrew they took the shoe (victory trophy) back to Pacific Grove with them.

The Breakers (5-2) may have won the shoe for the year, but they lost a berth in the CCS playoff to Palma High (5-2). Robert Louis Stevenson, which had a 5-2 season also, was passed over by the board of managers who voted unanimously in favor of Palma.

Carmel High ended the season at 0-7.

THE "GOLIATHS" of the North California CCS girls' swimming team championships failed to read the script.

The "Davids" are supposed to win, but little Carmel failed to fell the giants of the Santa Clara Valley and could only manage to place eighth out of 87 schools.

Actually, the Carmel High girls' swim team did quite well.

Kerry Neill set a record in the 100-yard freestyle with a time of 54.56. Cindy Frost also set a record in the 100-yard breast stroke in 1:09.99, and Kristina Neill set a record in the 100-yard back stroke at 1:03.09.

THE TENNIS AWARDS banquet was held Tuesday, Nov. 25.

Aileen Kelly won the "Most Valuable Player" award. Tracy Shields was named "Most Improved Player."

On the Junior Varsity team, Penny Wagstaff received the "Most Valuable Player," award. "Most Improved" went to Elisa Gilbert.

THE FOOTBALL banquet was held Nov. 18 at Carmel High School.

"Most Valuable Player" went to Curtis Vout. "Most Improved" was Mike Vout. The Kelsey Award went to Kris Chubb (student-athlete). The "Golden Helmet" award went to Matt Bordonaro (hardest hitter). The "Wolf Head" award went to Jay Knepp (best defensive player).

The "Captain's" awards went to Harry Lewis and Brian Hadgens.

Council faces area development management plan

By JOANNE HODGEN

A RESOLUTION calling for a management plan to determine the effects of development in the greater Carmel area will be reviewed by the Carmel City Council at its meeting Monday, Dec. 1.

If adopted, the resolution would be forwarded to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

Stanley Worth, president of the Carmel Area Coalition, told the council at its meeting Nov. 10, that a management plan encompassing Carmel, unincorporated Carmel and Carmel Valley is needed before the Local Coastal Program is adopted by the state Coastal Commission.

Under the provisions of the California Coastal Act of 1976, coastal municipalities and unincorporated areas must prepare Local Coastal Programs. LCPs are being prepared independently of one another by the city of Carmel and Monterey County.

The management survey would address the effects of further development in the Carmel area on wildlife, traffic congestion, air pollution and the flood plain along Carmel River, according to Worth.

Without a plan "we are embarking upon what appears to us (the coalition) a piecemeal piece of planning," he told the council.

WORTH SAID that development of the Odello property on the east side of Highway 1 south of Carmel River would affect the residents of Carmel Valley.

"People talk about the simple levees (to control flooding in the Lower Valley), but you can't do that without affecting people who own property on the river," Worth said.

Though Councilman Mike Brown had not seen the wording of the proposed resolution at press time, he said he is concerned with "what's happening in the zone of influence (greater Carmel) if for no other reason than to protect our village."

Proposed developments on the Odello property and the Hudson Riley Ranch near Point Lobos will affect Carmel, Brown said.

"I see this whole area as a golden egg," he said. If that egg is allowed to rot, Brown said, the core will be irreparably harmed. "That's why we have to have a study."

Brown said the LCP addresses the planning aspects of the area but not the impact of developments on air quality and traffic.

Carmel may not be affected by air pollutants caused by increased traffic, but pollution could be "dumped in Upper Carmel Valley," he said.

Brown said a study of economic impacts on Carmel of hotels and motels proposed in Carmel Valley should also be prepared.

Though Carmel reports a high hotel occupancy rate, he said Valley developments could eventually draw business away.

MAYOR BARNEY LAIOLO said, "We ought to keep our nose out of it."

Though Carmel may feel the impact of traffic, Laiolo said the Valley already has been ruined.

'We ought to keep our nose out of it.'

"They've let the Rancho Shopping Center go in without any planning. It's like locking the barn after the horse has gone away," he said.

"All they're trying to do is stop any kind of growth," which would be unfair to property owners, he said.

The City Council will also discuss:

■ Environmental reviews for proposed city projects.

City Administrator Doug Peterson said reviews will determine the impact of the projects on the surrounding areas. Studies are needed for the planned library annex at Lincoln and Sixth, restrooms at Devendorf Park and the senior citizen housing project on Dolores between Fourth and Fifth, he said.

California Planning Law requires that the environmental reviews be completed before a project can proceed, according to Peterson.

■ A statement approving a cooperative recreation program between the city and Carmel Unified School District.

Laiolo will also report on progress of the Recreation Commission.

■ Building heights and setback requirements in the Carmel Municipal Code.

At its meeting Oct. 22, the Carmel Planning Commission clarified a loophole in the building height regulation that permitted homes to be built to a greater height than the city intended when the code was written.

The ordinance was reworded to state that "No building shall exceed 24 feet in height measured from the existing grade adjacent to the exterior walls of the building at any point of measurement . . . "

The Planning Commission also approved the rewording of the code regulating side yard setbacks. If adopted by the council, the municipal code will require corner lots to have a five-foot setback from the public street.

■ A draft city energy policy prepared by the city staff at the request of Councilman Howard Brunn.

Peterson said the study includes suggestions on how to save energy as well as ways the city is conserving now. The study suggests turning off more lights, buying fuel-efficient cars and studying the building code to see if the council wants to increase insulation requirements in homes.

Before anything is implemented, Peterson said, "What we have to do is get our house in order."

■ Planning Commission recommendations for no-parking zones and stop signs.

The commissioners approved a no-parking zone on the north side of Fourth between Monte Verde and San Antonio at its meeting Wednesday, Nov. 19.

The commission also recommended that double yellow lines on San Antonio be extended to discourage southbound drivers turning left onto Fourth Street from cutting the corner; a stop sign be placed at Second Street for cars entering San Antonio, and two stop signs be installed at Eleventh Street to control east and westbound traffic entering Dolores Street; a tree be removed at Sante Fe and Third to widen the road and improve the turning radius, and that a pedestrian path be created on the west side of San Antonio by widening the shoulder.

Los Padres offers firewood cutting

Three areas of the Monterey Ranger District of the Los Padres National Forest are now open for cutting firewood for personal use.

Two areas, Summit Pay Permit and Lookout Pay Permit, require a $5 per cord permit to be obtained prior to cutting. The other area, Chews Ridge Free Use Area, requires a free permit to be obtained prior to cutting. All permits may be obtained from the office of the District Ranger, 406 South Mildred Ave., King City. Phone number is 385-5434 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Permits will not be issued on site at the areas.

"A maximum of three cords per household may be removed from the district per year," according to District Ranger Robert Breazeale. Wood cut under the personal use program may not be sold, traded or exchanged.

A PRELIMINARY HEARING Nov. 20 for the man charged with the murder of Robert Vaccaro, 39, of Carmel, was continued to Thursday, Dec. 11, according to Deputy District Attorney Steve Sillman.

The suspect, Raymond Earl Payton, 19, of Seaside, is charged with 10 felony counts, according to Sillman.

The district attorney's office filed for "special circumstances" which called for the death penalty or life sentence without possibility of parole on Monday, Nov. 17, according to Sillman. "Special circumstances" can be filed when murder is committed during a robbery, Sillman said.

Sillman said Vaccaro, who resided on San Marcos in Carmel, worked at a Carmel art gallery on Mission and Fourth.

The slaying occurred Oct. 17 on Garrapata Beach, according to Detective Sgt. Randall Fisher of the county Sheriff's Department.

Fisher said a man approached a couple, Gustavo and Teresa Guillen, who were camping on the beach and robbed them. The man then walked over to Vaccaro, who was also camping, robbed him and shot him in the head, Fisher said. The man returned to the couple and shot Guillen in the head, according to Fisher.

Vaccaro was taken by helicopter to Community Hospital where he died from the head wound, Fisher said.

Guillen, who Fisher said turned his head when he was shot, lost an eye. He was recently released from Community Hospital and has returned to San Francisco, where the couple resides, according to Fisher.

Payton is charged with murder and robbery in the death of Vaccaro, Sillman said. He is also charged with auto theft, robbery and assault with intent to commit murder in connection with the Guillens, Sillman said.

In a separate incident that occurred in Seaside Oct. 16, Payton is charged with robbery and two more counts of assault with intent to murder, according to Sillman.

Pilgrims' progress

If there's no turkey, corn solves problems

By MITZI AYALA
Capitol News Service

WE ARE TRAVELING back in time to Plymouth, and we're aiming for the year 1620.

The purpose of our trip? To learn about corn and the Pilgrim fathers. We're in luck, because we have with us on the trip a fascinating companion, Dan Macedo from Merced.

As we walk down the dirt paths between the houses, we notice an extraordinary sight: every dog in the settlement is hobbling around with one forepaw fastened to its neck.

Why would anyone do such a thing? To protect the corn. The colonists have learned to copy the Indian method of fertilizing their corn by burying a small fish among the four kernels that go into each little hill. But unfortunately, the colony's dogs have a taste for fish, and tying up one forepaw is the only method that works to keep them from digging up the fish.

MACEDO is intrigued.

Although he's a corn farmer, he studied marine biology at the Univesity of California at Davis, and finding out about planting the corn with decaying fish catches his attention.

"You know," he comments, "probably the biggest factor that corn removes from the soil is nitrogen. Fish, on the other hand, are extremely high in nitrogen. Interesting that the colonists and the Indians before them hit on just the right combination."

(For our benefit, Macedo points out that 20th century farmers solve the problem of nitrogen depletion by rotating their corn with alfalfa, which fixes nitrogen from the air and puts it back in the soil for the next crop of corn. They also supplement with additional nitrogen in the form of ammonium.)

The dogs, with their tied-up forepaws, aren't the only things to catch our attention. There's something else that has to do with corn, and we discover it as our party enters one of the primitive log houses. A woman is in the far corner of the dirt-floored cabin, and she's stirring a hot cauldron. Peering into the steaming, whitish liquid, we can just make out a few kernels of corn, roiling around in the simmering liquid. She explains that there's also ground hickory nuts and chestnuts cooking in there.

She's cooking up the Pilgrim's substitute for milk. Until 1624, there will not be a dairy animal in all of Plymouth, and hunger being the mother of invention, the Pilgrims have devised this broth as a substitute for milk for their children.

Although the Pilgrims can't know it, this corn and nut "milk" is an excellent protein source. Corn is low in two factors needed for protein (tryptophan and lysine), while nuts happen to have those factors in abundance. By putting the corn and nuts together, the Pilgrim mothers are providing their children with good, complete protein just as surely as if they were serving them cow's milk.

In hard times, corn is a vital staple in Plymouth, and the resourceful housewife makes cornmeal porridge, bread, puddings, pancakes and pies.

Leftover cornmeal porridge is sliced and fried for breakfast.

Plane crashes in Valley

A SMALL PLANE crashed on landing at Carmel Valley Airport Sunday, Nov. 23, after clipping the top of a tree at the west end of the runway.

The pilot, Todd Loomis of Carmel Valley, suffered a head cut, but no other injuries were reported from the accident at 5 p.m., according to Monterey County Sheriff's Department. There were two passengers, Gregg Modoff and Margie Blanding, police said.

Reports from residents that the plane was flying fast and making erratic dives were not confirmed by the Sheriff's Department.

Loomis, who listed his address as the Blue Sky Lodge on Flight Road, could not be reached for comment.

Sgt. John Chrisan of the Sheriff's Department said Loomis reported a power failure forced him to land. The plane hit the top of a tree near Ford Road and nosedived 20 feet into the ground, Chrisan said. The front of the plane was extensively damaged.

Paul Boochini, a resident of Buena Vista Del Rio who said he saw the crash, said: "I saw it take off in fairly erratic fashion, making a steep climb and then a sharp dive over the river." When the plane returned a half hour later, Boochini said it came in for a landing faster than normal from the west end of the airport, while the normal approach is from the east into the wind.

Boochini said he would file a report with the Federal Aviation Administration in San Jose. Chrisan said no criminal charges had been filed, but that his department would also file a report with the FAA.

State forecast is good

California's economy should have a good year in 1981, as the state's high-technology base continues to expand and other industries recover from the recession of 1980, according to United California Bank's 18th annual economic forecast.

Dr. Raymond Jallow, UCB senior vice president and chief economist, predicted that "real growth will not match the very rapid rates of 1976 through 1978, but will continue to exceed that of the U.S. as a whole."

California's gross state product is projected to advance to a total of $352 billion in 1981. UCB's forecast notes that if California were a separate nation it would rank as the ninth largest producer of goods and services in the world.

"Taking away the effects of inflation, the state is expected to achieve real growth of 4.5 percent in 1981," Jallow stated.

"This will be more than twice the growth rate for the U.S., as California outpaces the nation for the eighth year in a row," he said.

Transient rental plan due

By JOANNE HODGEN

AN ORDINANCE to control the use of homes as transient rentals will be considered by the Carmel City Council at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Dec. 1 in City Hall.

Regulations to control short-term rentals of single-family homes were approved by the Carmel Planning Commission at its meeting Oct. 22 before being forwarded to the council.

The proposed ordinance requires the permanent occupant or his agent to register the home with the city clerk. The registration defines the time each home will be rented. No fee is required.

In 1978, it was brought to the attention of the council that many homes were used on a transient basis. A proposal rejected by the council in January 1979 would have clarified the ordinance and upheld the 30-day minimum occupancy requirement for single-family dwellings.

The purpose of the ordinance is to "enhance the residential character of the city." The ordinance states that the uncontrolled transient use of dwelling units "could severely damage the character of the city by increasing disproportionately the amount of area devoted to visitors as opposed to residents."

A condition attached to the ordinance requires that a permanent occupant reside in the dwelling for 270 days or more during a 12-month period. Transient occupancies must be for intervals of one week or more.

Valley intersection problem remains

By STEVE HELLMAN

PAT AND PAULINE HERMAN had a sleepless night Nov. 18.

The Carmel Valley couple, who own the Farm Center Country store at Mid-Valley, were wracked by visions of their 25-year retirement dream being stymied by a government plan.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors decided Nov. 18 that the Hermans' land behind their store could be the site for a new road.

Not just any road, however. The so-called Center Street extension would cut through the Hermans' acre of land to provide for increased traffic from subdivisions on Robinson Canyon Road.

The Hermans have run their country store for 25 years at Robinson Canyon and Carmel Valley roads.

The supervisors have been in a months-long quandary over how to accommodate more traffic on Robinson Canyon Road due from the Carmel Valley Ranch development.

Traffic from the development would be routed to Carmel Valley Road via Center Street, the Mid-Valley Shopping Center and Berwick or Dorris drives in a proposal favored by the supervisors during a public hearing last week.

Plans to build either an underpass or put up a traffic signal at the intersection of the two major roads were ruled unacceptable by the supervisors, who declared that either plan represents an urban solution to the traditional country corner.

Despite fervent protests from Herman, who said he was preparing to sell his land and would fight to block the street, the supervisors instructed the county Public Works Department to prepare a cost analysis and design for it.

The supervisors will conduct further public hearings on the matter before deciding on a solution, although the overwhelming indication at last week's meeting was that they will plan for extending Center Street across the Herman land.

"We had a sleepless night. We're pretty distraught," Mrs. Herman said the next day.

She explained that negotiations to sell their acre were underway with a couple in Los Angeles.

While the property was listed for sale at $1 million, Mrs. Herman said she had no idea how much value it would lose if the street is built across it.

You owe your horse--and yourself-- the good life at Rancho Laureles

SOUND, PROFESSIONAL horse care begins with safe, comfortable accommodations and a high-quality feeding program at Rancho Laureles.

Our deluxe new barn offers the ultimate in luxury, safety and comfort. Each 12 x 12 box stall opens onto a securely fenced 24-foot paddock. Inside, all stalls have foot-cushioning rubber mats, automatic waterers and feeders. Stall fronts and sliding doors have heavy-gauge mesh so the horse benefits from good air circulation and seeing what's going on, while he is prevented from hanging his head over the door and possibly fussing with passing horses or people.

Walls between stalls are solid, so there's no rivalry with the horse next door. And all edges are reinforced with metal anti-chew strips. There's even a convenient blanket rack on each stall door.

Two spacious tack rooms are convenient to all stalls and offer individual tack lockers for each patron.

Of course, our old barn has a charm all its own, with oversized, exceptionally airy stalls and the same large adjoining paddocks. A large new wash rack with hot water to pamper your horse is right outside.

WHERE WE RIDE

Our two securely-fenced riding arenas offer excellent, well-drained sand footing. One measures 135 x 325 and is used for basic schooling as well as jumping. Our new 150 x 275 foot arena includes a regulation dressage court with plenty of room to spare!

And our 75-foot round lungeing arena is proving useful not only for lungeing, but for working green horses or beginning riders who profit from the secure surroundings.

The half-mile sand track that encircles our easterly fields is a perfect place to warm up a horse (or cool him out after a workout), leg up for an event or simply trot a few miles as good exercise.

Then there's Garland Park with its 541 acres of trails, plus the adjoining trails through to Robinson Canyon and the soon-to-be-opened new parkland to the east — a trailrider's paradise, uniquely beautiful every day of the year.

THE FINEST CARE

Now, more than ever, we believe that our feeding program pays off. Our 17% protein alfalfa hay cubes put weight on even rundown, skinny horses and keep it there.

We are also pleased to work with two of Monterey County's finest veterinarians and an excellent farrier, who all contribute to your horse's overall health and well-being.

LESSONS, ANYONE?

Whether you're just learning to post or have a specific problem over fences or in dressage, Doug Downing, our knowledgeable and very personable instructor, will come up with an answer.

He is available for private, semi-private or small group lessons on the flat or over fences.

GOOD COMPANY

One of the nicest things about Rancho Laureles is its relaxed, informal atmosphere. People tend to linger, and that makes us feel good, because it means they like it here. After a ride, they'll sit around, enjoy a cup of coffee or a soft drink and chat — mostly about horses, of course, but not always. Real friendships have grown among our riders.

But best of all, newcomers are made to feel genuinely welcome, whether they're nervous beginners or old pros. There's always a helping hand and a generous sprinkling of advice, and you feel you "belong" right from the start.

Seeing is believing. Why not drive out into the Carmel Valley sunshine to pay us a visit?

The court at Sunset Center where a terrace is proposed.

Terrace at Center is priority

By JOANNE HODGEN

CONSTRUCTION of a terrace at Sunset Center is the top priority of the Carmel Cultural Commission, according to Commission Chairman Jean White.

City Administrator Doug Peterson was to have appeared before the Cultural Commission at its regular meeting Monday, Nov. 24, with a progress report on the terrace project.

A $10,000 donation was made by Mrs. Tom Work about 3½ years ago to Sunset Center for a terrace, Mrs. White said.

The city allocated $17,000 more to meet the estimated costs, according to Peterson. However, he said, "I would hope it could be done for less than that."

Though the money has been earmarked in the city budget for two years straight, Mrs. White said, "At this point the money is sitting there."

The terrace would be built at the north end of Sunset Center next to the main parking lot. An open concrete patio is there now.

The 60-by-30-foot area is surrounded by withering shrubbery and rose bushes that the city has allowed to die because of the anticipated construction, according to Sunset Center Director Richard Tyler.

The area is often used by residents and lunch-goers who enjoy its seclusion, Tyler said.

Before the terrace project could proceed, an underground sprinkling system had to be installed and drainage corrected, according to Mrs. White.

However, the city did not pursue a bid on the terrace project after the improvements were made, she said.

Peterson said that before the project can be sent out for bids, a detailed plan must be drawn. A concept drawing was prepared by architect Robert Stanton in 1977.

Mrs. Work made the donation with the contingency that Stanton's concept be implemented, Peterson said.

Mrs. White said, "We're most anxious to have this get started and get it done."

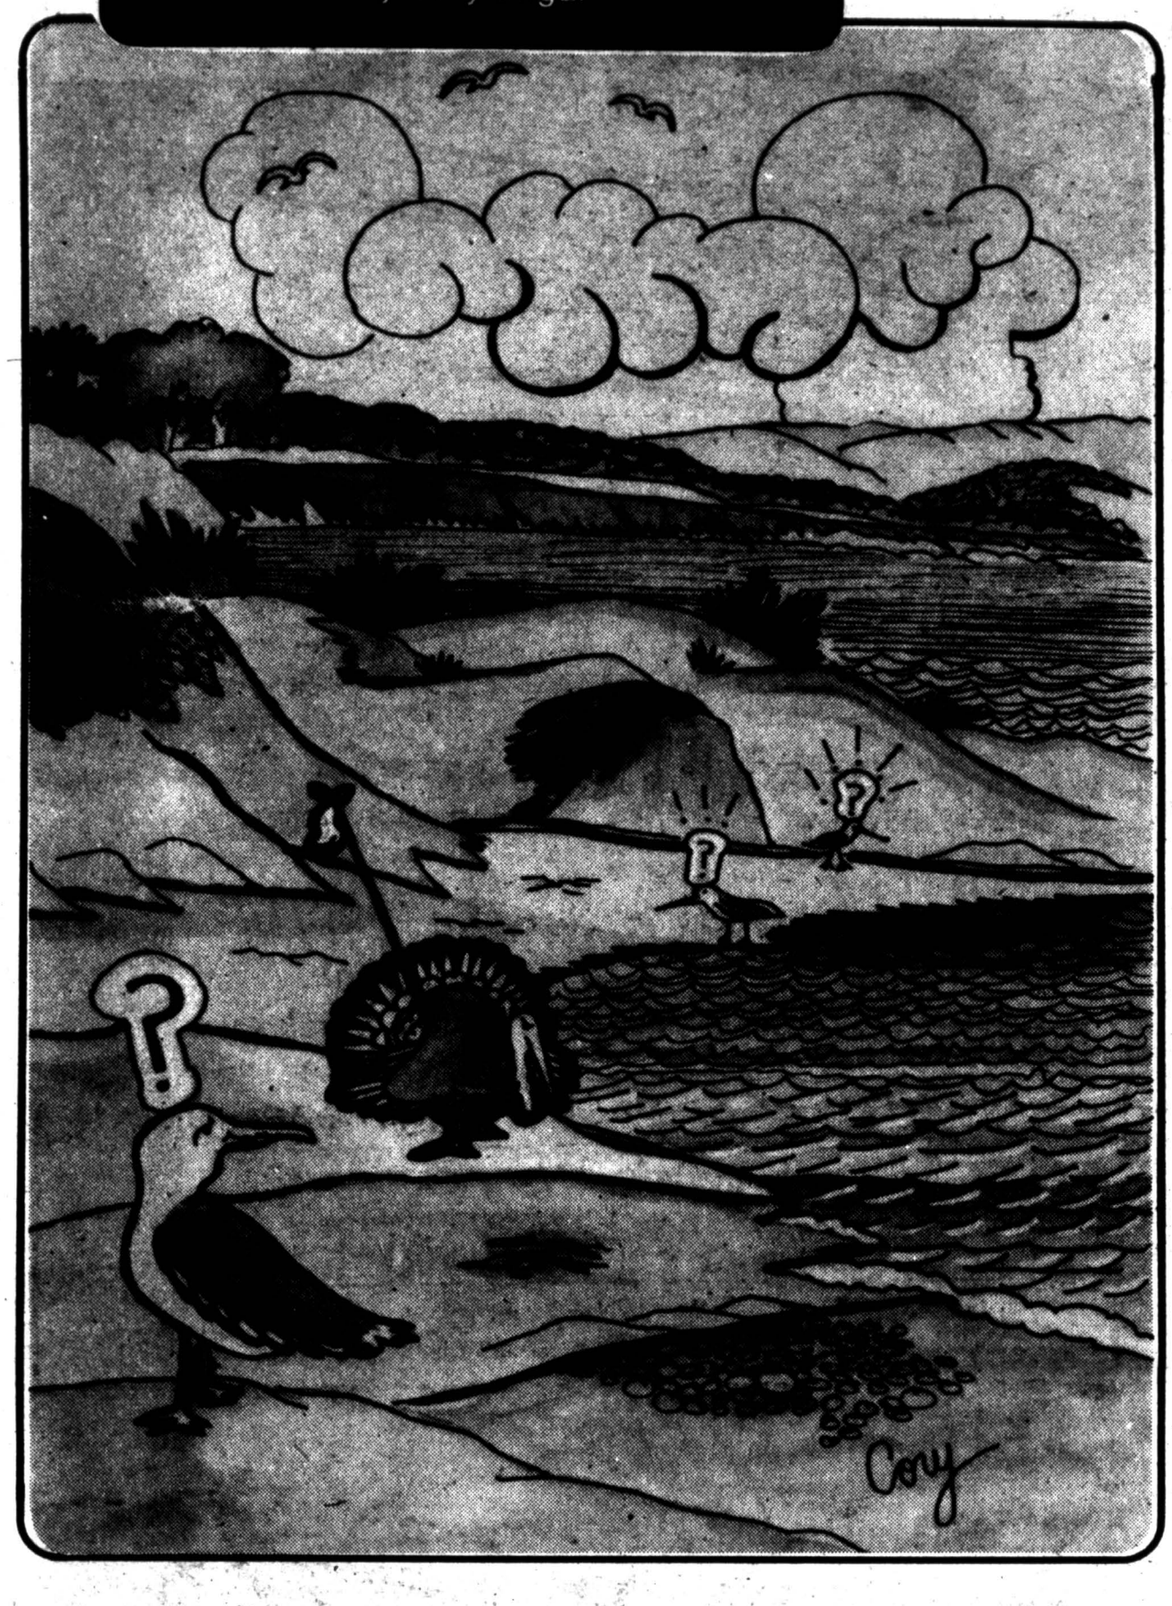
Now THAT'S Carmel!

By Cory Sligar



Editorial

Put up, or shut up

By JACK HANFORD

WHILE AL AND JUDY Eisner are off visiting Egypt and Israel, I've been stopping by to offer whatever help is needed.

Since the staffs of The Carmel Pine Cone, Carmel Valley Outlook and Monterey Peninsula Review are quite capable of running things without me, Lenny Levine, the managing editor, kindly suggested that I might like to write an editorial. That's a task which is usually done with expedience by Al. Being shy, especially shy on editorial talents, I begged off. But the opportunity to reach out with a thought or two became too enticing. So here goes:

NOW THAT the elections are over and throughout the nation the losers are casting about for the reasons why, have you wondered, as I have, how these educated politicians can ponder the cause of their loss of power?

The other night I watched a number of them discussing the strategy and the political persuasions that might surely return them to office next time. Not one of those former officeholders reasoned that he had lost, in many instances by overwhelming odds, because he didn't accomplish for his constituents what he had promised.

Is it possible that almost all candidates really believe that their pledges while running for office will be taken as "political rhetoric" and that on the whole no one expects them to achieve their promises? Even in these times of the new morality, is it reasonable that some of us, naive as we are, can expect that a man or woman who is seeking office will have a sense of honor?

The answer is a resounding YES!

Yes, today we expect — no, demand that every one of our officeholders keeps his or her word. We require each one of them to argue and even fight for the very goals that he set before us in such a persuasive manner during the campaign. Not only do we insist that they fight, we expect them to win. And failing that, we'll probably throw the rascals out.

Then we'll try somebody else, with the fervent hope that someday we'll find someone who will have the competence to win an election with practical, straightforward promises. And someone who can go about the business of keeping those promises.

Is that too much to hope for?

Cultural grants

Dear Editor:

The board of directors of the Carmel Citizens Committee is disturbed by the recent action of the Carmel City Council to overrule the recommendations of the Cultural Commission, which was assigned the task of deciding the appropriate contributions to be made to various local cultural organizations.

Having gathered detailed materials from each applicant organization concerning its function, need and financial status, members of the Cultural Commission held several meetings and produced a full report specifying precise amounts they had determined to be appropriate contributions. A few groups were excluded from the list of donees, having been considered lacking in need, or not qualifying under the criteria previously specified by the council.

At the Oct. 13 council meeting, representatives of several groups which apparently felt shortchanged by the Cultural Commission's determinations appeared before the council to plead their cases. Judgmental and financial chaos reigned for more than an hour, and by the end of the session the council had overturned several commission decisions, and had exceeded its own specified cultural budget by several thousand dollars.

The real issue of concern is the delegation of authority, e.g., the City Council's requesting the Cultural Commission to make informed decisions for them and then ignoring and overturning these decisions.

Next year the City Council must again determine whether it wants to assume the responsibility for making these decisions itself, as have councils in the past, or whether it wishes to assign the job to the Cultural Commission. If it decides to follow the latter course, one would hope the council would give more credence to the delegated recommendations it has requested.

Otherwise, based on this year's performance, we would anticipate another standing-room-only audience for additional city handouts.

Plan for library is linked to parking and apartments

By BARNEY LAIOLO

JUST SO YOU KNOW what's been happening since my last letter . . . I've been devoting many hours to many projects, all which have, in my opinion, comparable urgency.

In one project, City Administrator Doug Peterson, Library Commissioner Barney Anderson and yours truly met with Carol McKee and Max McKee of the Pine Inn to discuss the possibilities of a joint venture to combine the use of city property on Lincoln and Fifth and the adjoining property on Monte Verde and Fifth to develop not only the library addition, but also a parking facility and an apartment complex above the parking. Until I receive more information on the use of those sites as a combined venture regarding underground construction and height limitations, I cannot give you further information at this time.

Rest assured I will keep you informed before any final decisions or commitments are made.

AN ITEM which has taken considerable time deals with the housing-for-elderly project, a concept so generously supported in the last election.

I have been studying the maps on the terrain and the possible best use of the land. City Administrator Peterson and I have had preliminary discussions with members of the Carmel Foundation regarding what interest they might have for developing a building on this site to augment their well established type of housing in this area. This, too, is in the beginning stages that require a great deal of study. We'll keep you informed on this, also.

THE OTHER ITEM which has taken considerable study and time has been the possible use of North Field of Sunset Center for parking and a park area.

Peterson, Public Works Superintendent Bill Askew and I met with representatives of mayor's report

automatic parking facilities that are being proposed for Marin County and Palo Alto. It proved to be a very challenging and interesting arrangement, and it could be quite possible that a system of this type could be incorporated on this land. The system would allow almost double the number of cars that could be parked in this space using conventional parking patterns. Another of the great features is that there would be no fumes generated as the cars are not driven but put in place by dollies.

One other feature which has great merit regards the vandalism problem. Since there is no public access where the cars are stored, that problem is solved.

THOSE ARE SOME of the basic proposals that were discussed and, again, the need for considerable study is apparent.

Don't jump to any great immediate conclusions as many, many factors have to be considered, but thought I'd just let you know what serious consideration is being given to all of these matters.

THE NEXT City Council meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Dec. 1.

I hope many of you will continue to come to our meetings.

CARMEL'S traditional tree lighting ceremony will be on Friday, Dec. 5, at 6:30 p.m. at Devendorf Park.

Plan to join your friends and neighbors for this community event.

Still smiling
between the piles of papers,
Mayor Barney

Decorations planned for shut-ins

The Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club is initiating a program for shut-ins this year.

A collection center for Christmas decorations will be set up at Piccadilly Nursery.

Last year, members of the Garden Club made Christmas decorations suitable for small tables or bed trays and took them to the Carmel Foundation for distribution. This year, the club is inviting residents to participate and hopes to make the project an annual affair.

Tables will be set up at Piccadilly Dec. 17 to 19 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. to accept donations of decorations. Police will block off a parking space.

The club suggests small pots or decorative containers, wreaths, candles, fresh or dried material, small trees or fresh flower arrangements.

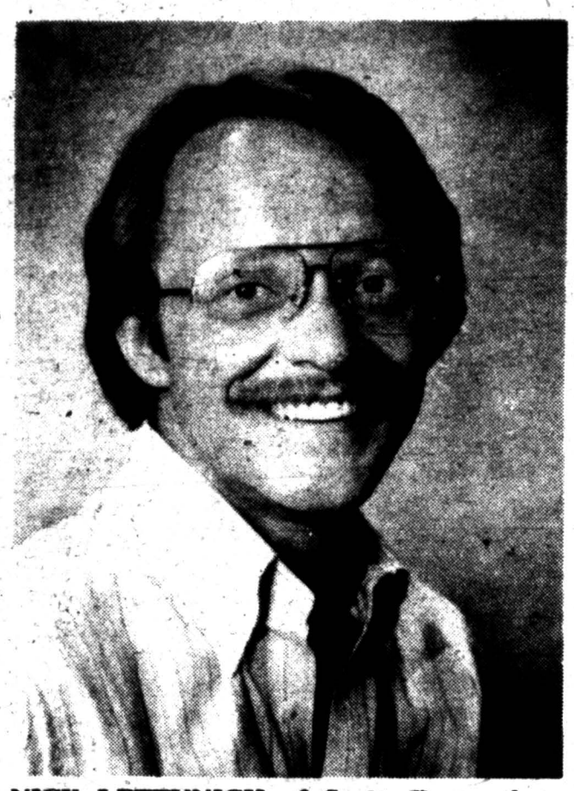
Cookbook celebrates legacy of Aphrodite

An autograph party celebrating the publication of Nick Lettunich's Aphrodisiac Cookbook promises to be lots of fun Saturday, Nov. 29 at 12:30 p.m. at the Thunderbird Bookstore, The Barnyard, Carmel. Aphrodisiac delights will be there for the sampling. Everyone is invited to attend.



NICK LETTUNICH of Santa Cruz, who studied with James Beard in New York, will be present to sign copies of his new cookbook, The Aphrodisiac Cookbook Saturday, Nov. 29 from 12:30 p.m. at The Thunderbird Bookstore, The Barnyard, Carmel. Everyone is invited to attend and try some recipe samples.

The book is billed as a complete guide to the adventures of romantic dining. Suddenly, you can be on a par with Cleopatra, Madame Du Barry, Mata Hari and all the famous seductors and seductresses of the past, who undoubtedly used these ingredients and recipes.

Included is a comprehensive list of natural aphrodisiacs passed on through the centuries.

Dedicated to Aphrodite, who is "alive and well in all of us," the book is authorized by Nick Lettunich, who grew up in the Pajaro Valley of California, where the main agricultural product is the same fruit that Eve gave Adam. An introduction to James Beard, and being able to enroll in one of his classes without the customary two-year waiting period, resulted in Nick's being invited to work with Beard in New York and during an important tour of southern France.

"Working with him and being with him made me realize that it's where I want to be, in the food world," Nick said about his association with Beard, who he admires tremendously, and who he respects for "his knowledge of food and his ability to communicate that knowledge to others."

Returning to California, Nick became manager-chef for a private club near Santa Cruz which also caters to groups and gives him "the fantastic opportunity of working creatively with food every day." Working with him on this cookbook were his sister, Julie Welch, and Rita Calvert.

Included in the book are recipes for Gently Persuasive Prawns, Cavalier Cocktails and Kahlua Kissed Mousse.

Everyone is invited to attend and sample food to their heart's content.

The Thunderbird Bookstore is open Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Sunday and Monday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. For further information, phone 624-1803.

Over 25 of the area's finest craftsmen present the 3rd annual show and sale to benefit Friends of the Sea Otter and the new Monterey Bay Chapter of the American Cetacean Society.

Artisans' benefit sale is this weekend

All kinds of crafts will be sold when artisans will give thanks to the animals Friday through Sunday, Nov. 28-30 at the La Playa Hotel, Camino Real and Eighth, Carmel.

This is Monterey Bay Area craftsmen's third annual benefit for Friends of the Sea Otter and American Cetacean Society. Carved birds and whales, jewelry, leatherwork, enamels, dolls, and other crafts, excellent for Christmas gifts, will be available.

BILL STONE OF CARMEL will donate one of his watercolors as a raffle prize at the annual Artisans Give Thanks To The Animals gift show Friday through Sunday, Nov. 28-30 at the La Playa Hotel, Carmel. Stone is past president of Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art and the Carmel Art Association and has spent more than 20 years at work on his non-traditional watercolor style. Stone is also head of the Art Department at Carmel High School.

Over 25 of the area's finest craftsmen will be represented. The purpose of the event is to showcase local artists who appreciate the privilege of living in this special part of the world and who want to make a personal contribution to protecting the fragile marine animals found in this area.

A wine preview will spark the event Friday, Nov. 28 from 6-11 p.m. Everyone is invited to attend, and a $2 donation is asked.

The craft show begins Saturday, Nov. 29 from 10 a.m.-10 p.m. and continues Sunday, Nov. 29 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Admission to this event is free. To top off the three-day gala, a raffle is planned for Sunday, Nov. 30 at 4 p.m. Tickets are $1, and may be purchased at Friends of the Sea Otter, The Barnyard, Carmel, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., 625-3290 or through Mary Rodriguez, 375-5931.

In addition to gifts and dinner at fine area restaurants, sculpture by Loet van der Veen; a carved whale by Randy Puckett; a carved bird by Jack Francis; a painting by Bill Stone, a bronze otter by Joe Favella; Limoges Enamel Picture by Paola Berthoin and Godiva Chocolates will be raffled off.

Friends of the Sea Otter is a non-profit educational trust established in 1968 to help protect the small California sea otter population and its marine environment. They operate an educational center in The Barnyard at the entrance to Carmel Valley 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily.

The Monterey Bay chapter is the most recent addition to the American Cetacean Society. The society focuses on matters aquatic — primarily whales, dolphins and porpoises. Their monthly meetings (third Thursday of each month at 7:30 p.m. at Hopkins Marine Station in Pacific Grove) feature experts on marine mammals and are free and open to the public.

For further information on the Christmas gift show phone 375-5931, 624-9467 or 625-5304.

Collection of 'flying art' objects opens Monday at Sunset Center

A unique art form will be celebrated Monday, Dec. 1 at the Marjorie Evans Gallery of Sunset Center, Carmel. This art form is unique because it flies. It is the frisbee.

Drawn from one of the largest private collection of flying discs, Frisbees, flying saucers and other flying objects, this display chronicles the evolution of the plastic flying disc in a 30-odd year span, 1948 to present.

The pop art object sells more in North America than baseball, basketball and football combined. Discs from all over the world, including hundreds of miniature discs will be shown.

More and more university and college schedules include Frisbee courses, as the disc can be a challenging object to throw and catch with skill. Frisbee gold is also a very popular sport. Carmel High School and Robert Louis Stevenson School both offer ultimate Frisbee teams and held a competition on November 9 at the Stevenson School.

The basic disc is the result of an injection of pellitized plastic nibs under heat at high pressure created in a mold. This is a tool and die maker's art form.

The gallery will be open each weekday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge. The exhibit will be on display through December 16th.

Great gift idea: tickets to Sunset Center's events

By RICHARD TYLER

'TIS THE START of the holiday season and Sunset Center has lined up performances that should help make gift planning a bit easier.

Here are some excellent ideas for holiday gift giving:

On Jan. 17, we are proud to present a Broadway show in Carmel. After a year of playing to standing-room-only in New York City, Pat Carroll has taken her successful one-woman show, Gertrude Stein, Gertrude Stein, Gertrude Stein, to the rest of the country. Originally planned for concert and university stages, the production intended to open just a few weeks to acquire some reviews then move on. However, the staggering praise in review after review kept Miss Carroll and Stein happily engaged at New York's historic Provincetown Playhouse for more than a year. She received "Best Actress" award from the New York Drama Critics, and the production received the Outer Critics Circle Award as "most outstanding play of the season."

Miss Carroll, who commissioned playwright Marty Martin to write the show, was impressed with the life of Gertrude Stein.

"Gertrude Stein was indomitable," she said. "She went against all kinds of barriers and all kinds of non-acceptance and years of beating her brains against a creative wall. In most people's minds, Gertrude Stein is a dour woman, sitting as in the Picasso portrait, always staring out as if her life were a heavy burden. I researched and realized that this woman who attracted the greatest creative minds of the late 19th and early 20th centuries had humor and wit as well as great energy and forcefulness. And this is the area in which I concentrated."

The actress' successful choice and evocation of Gertrude Stein probably will come as a surprise to those who have known her as a television comedienne from her appearances on The Danny Thomas Show, Password, The Mary Tyler Moore Show and Police Woman. The play is set in Paris. The address: 27 Rue de Fluerus, Miss Stein's home for more than 40 years. Gertrude and her friend, Alice B. Toklas, are being evicted the next day. It is a rainy day and Alice is asleep upstairs as Gertrude reminisces about their lives — separate and together and the stories and people — Picasso, Hemingway, Rousseau, Fitzgerald, Joyce — who weave in and out of their lives.

It is a stunning show. Reserved seating is now available at the director's office.

GILBERT AND SULLIVAN will take over the stage of the Sunset Theater Jan. 21.

Throughout the history of the theater, there have been many who have collaborated to write musical works. But never have any enjoyed more fame than William S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. Between 1875 and 1896, they wrote 13 comic operas; and all but two were greeted with immediate success. Today just about all of them are enjoyed throughout the world. Indeed there probably isn't a day in the year when someone somewhere isn't producing the Mikado, H.M.S. Pinafore, The Pirates of Penzance or one of the others in either English, French, Spanish, Italian, German, Yiddish, Japanese, Chinese, Russian, or any of the 25 languages into which the operas have been translated. (Not to mention swing, bop and jazz productions.)

Many have tried to explain the key to their incredible success, but perhaps the comment of a boy of 6 is as good an explanation as any. When asked if he had enjoyed the performance, he replied: "Oh yes, very much. It's the sort of show to which a boy can take his parents without feeling embarrassed."

The personalities of Gilbert and Sullivan were certainly not similar and their relationship through the years was a stormy one. Gilbert came from an upper-class family and had a quick wit, a sharp tongue and no desire to hide either. He studied law and became an unsuccessful attorney before finally yielding to his great passion for the theater.

Sullivan was the gentler and more amiable of the two and was always anxious to get along with people, particularly the "best people." He was very much at home in the best circles and Queen Victoria herself was a great fan. She encouraged him to give himself fully to grand opera and it was a constant source of irritation in his relationship with Gilbert that he always felt his music played second fiddle to Gilbert's words. But he needed the money which their collaboration brought in, especially since he had a great love for the tables at Monte Carlo.

A third name must be mentioned in the Gilbert and Sullivan story, that of the great producer and manager, Richard D'Oyly Carte. It was Carte who built a theater (The Savoy) especially for their operas and spared no expense in costumes, scenery and whatever was necessary to insure their success. But most important of all, it was Carte who always found a way to soothe hurt feelings and bring them back together when conflicts threatened to end the relationship. Indeed, there would hardly be any Gilbert and Sullivan today if it were not for D'Oyly Carte. Finally, even he failed and a monstrous argument ended it all much too soon.

But fortunately for us, they left us the likes of Sir Joseph Porter, Little Buttercup, the Pirate King, Ko-Ko, Jack Point and even Capt. Fitzbattleaxe. Undoubtedly when another 100 years have passed, if there is a stage somewhere, people will still want to visit with these singular persons, for no matter what cares and troubles we bring to them, they reach out and lighten our burden. They are all preachers of Gilbert's holy gospel: "There is humor in all things and the truest philosophy is that which teaches us to find it and to make the most of it."

Reserved seating is available for this performance now at the director's office.

OF EIKO AND KOMA it has been said, "Their dance has the fascinating power of the legendary cobra. You watch, unable to look away."

Eiko and Koma are extraordinary Japanese dancers-choreographers who have been presenting their work in the United States since the mid-'70s. Successfully blending their Eastern dramatic traditions with Western movements, they create exciting visual pictures whose impact remains long after they finish dancing. Eiko and Koma began dancing together in 1971 while members of the Hijakata Company in Tokyo. After their debut there, they traveled to Hanover, Germany, in 1972 where they studied with Manja Chmiel, a disciple of Mary Wigman. For the next three years they performed and taught in cities throughout Europe and Africa. A year's additional study in Yokohama with Ohno Kazuo prepared them to continue their work in the United States. In May 1976 the Japan Society brought them here as cultural exchange visitors and sponsored their New York City premier performances of White Dance. They now divide their time between the East and West coasts performing and teaching.

Like the attenuated movement concepts on which Kabuki theater is based, these choreographers work in a slow, almost drug-like framework. Producing dramatic tensions by using phrases and repetition makes Eiko and Koma's work low keyed. They are gifted performers and choreographers. They know how to slow down one's metabolism and make one focus on deep issues. They create an atmosphere of timelessness. The risks they take transmit a sense of power to the audience. Truly a special kind of performance. Since this is part of the Festival of Dance in Carmel, there is a limited amount of reserved seating left.

Tickets to this performance can be reserved at the director's office.

We hope that you will consider these special performances in your holiday gift list. For more information, call Sunset Center, 624-3996.

Robinson Canyon Road unfolds . . .

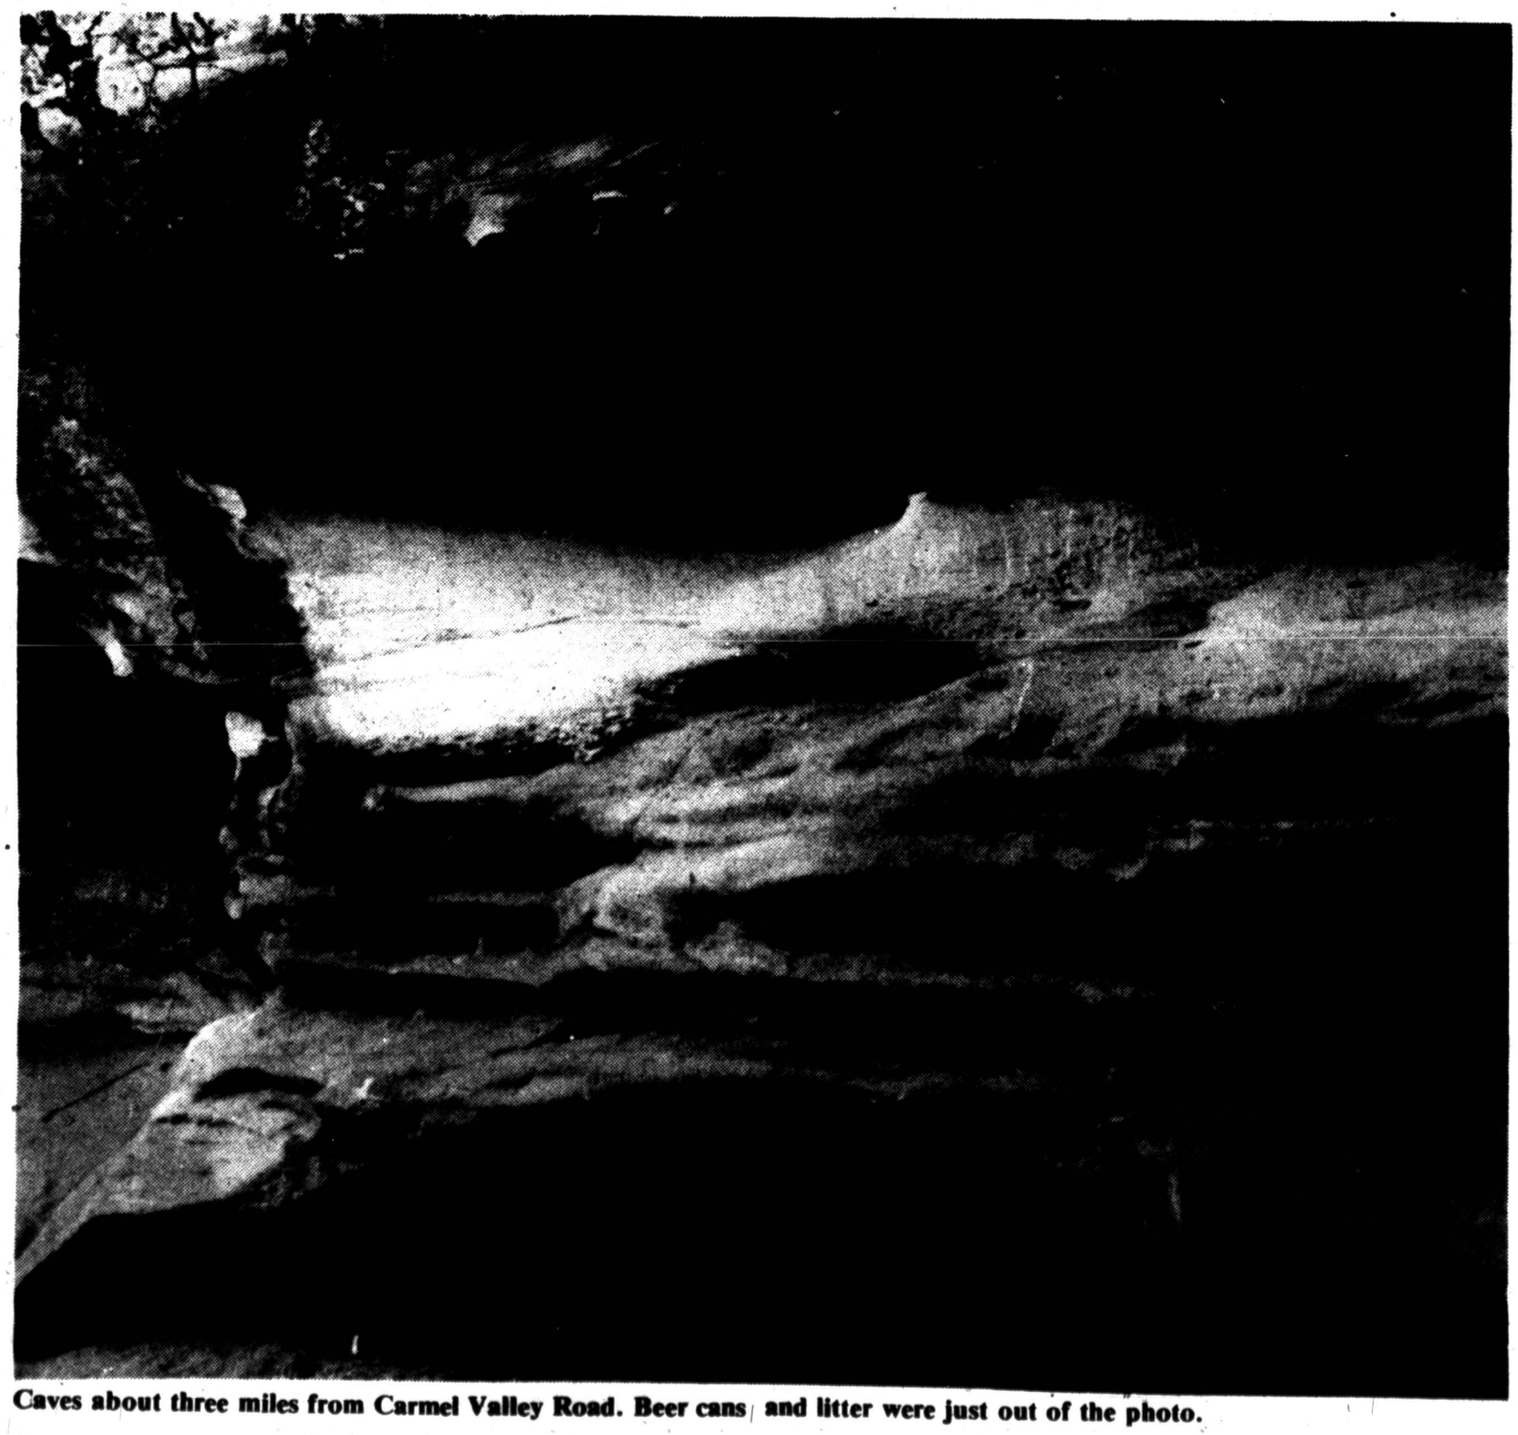
The road curves into the unknown 2.3 miles from the Carmel Valley Road . . .

. . . and uncovers a vista another 1.6 miles south.



Caves about three miles from Carmel Valley Road. Beer cans and litter were just out of the photo.

Much remains from the days of land grants

By JEAN MAHONEY

FROM THE LITTLE white building across the Farm Center to the Oppenheimer Ranch, Robinson Canyon Road winds through what used to be open fields and pear orchards.

The history of the Robinson Canyon area dates back to the mid-1830s when most of Carmel Valley was split into land grants. By 1875, Bradley Sargent had bought the land that is now the Oppenheimer Ranch, or Rancho San Carlos.

The Snivelys and the Wolters owned ranches on the floor of the canyon, with Sargent holding vast acreage farther up the canyon.

IN 1879, Robert Louis Stevenson, in very poor health, went camping in the canyon.

Jonathan Wright, who was renting a cabin and some land from Sargent, found him in great pain and, with his partner Anson Smith, nursed Stevenson back to health.

Life was hard, but the families of the Valley had a wonderful sense of camaraderie. Parties moved from homes to the Carmel Athletic and Social Club when it was built in 1890.

The deed transferring ownership of the building from the Berwicks, whose pear orchards abutted Robinson Canyon, to the Trustees for the Carmel Athletic and Social Club is a beautifully handwritten document that was executed in 1897. As outlined in the deed, the Club was for "physical, cultural and literary purposes," and a portion of its revenue was to benefit the schools. The price was the "sum of one dollar, gold coin of the United States of America." Ownership would revert to the "parties of the first part" if there were any distribution of "spirituous liquor."

THE VALLEY'S ownerships were changing, and that held true for Robinson Canyon.

George Gordon Moore bought the 22,000-acre Sargent property in 1923. He built a road into the mountains and lived lavishly in his mansion until the 1929 market crash forced him to sell the ranch. Arthur C. Oppenheimer bought it, and that ownership remains today.

In 1879, Robert Louis Stevenson forecasted that the area would soon change.

He was right, of course, and while there are fewer open fields and less wildlife, there are more memories and history.

Big can be beautiful: fine wines from some of California's largest wineries

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

WE'RE GRATEFUL to wine writer Jerry D. Mead for calling our attention to editor-publisher Ed Everett's scan of wine writers in his publication The Wine Trade.

Everett attacked what, according to Mead, "he considers a sin of omission or snobbism" on the part of a great many wine writers.

He particularly cited the Almaden 1977 Monterey Cabernet Sauvignon, which not only won a gold medal at the 1980 Orange County Fair, but also came in first in the Los Angeles Times Home Magazine vintage tasting of Cabernet Sauvignon wines. To quote Everett, " . . . with few exceptions . . . the wine press virtually ignored an eminently newsworthy wine."

WE ARE IN A GOLDEN AGE of winemaking, of advanced technology, of variable speed centrifuges for cleaning the juice before fermentation, controlling the temperature during fermentation to preserve the fragile esters of bouquet.

Enology is a science of winemaking taught in our universities. The department of viticulture and enology of the University of California at Davis is the planet's fountainhead of such knowledge. The graduates people our wineries in not only the United States, but other countries where the vine flourishes.

Hallmarks of present fine winemaking exist in expensive stainless steel, fine oak cooperage and sterile bottling lines. From the vineyard real estate to the finished bottled product, we are in a highly capital-intensive industry, with technological demands of newly-aware intelligence in action. It most commonly exists in the large wineries. Big no longer means bad, nor small good.

IT WAS SHOCKING to many when we first wrote, more than a dozen years ago, that Gallo Hearty Burgundy was the best value in red wine in the country.

We can still say that Gallo is not the largest winery in the world without reason. We'll go a step further and say that we've never met a winemaker anywhere in the world, who does not pause at the mention of the names of Ernest and Julio Gallo, with respect, admiration and gratitude for what they have given to the wine industry.

In one of our recent wine appreciation classes, Eric Wente of the highly esteemed Wente Brothers Winery of Livermore was asked about the size of his fourth-generation institution. "That's not easy to answer," he said. "We have sales of about 650,000 cases of wine a year, which might seem big to you, unless you look at Gallo with maybe 50 million cases per year. Robert Mondavi is about 250,000 cases a year. The so-called 'boutique' wineries are about 10,000 cases in annual sales."

Greg De Lucca, director-general of Sterling Vineyard, owned by Coca Cola of Atlanta, cited the handsome Calistoga winery, which is the flagship of the Taylor wine empire, as being 65,000 cases, while Taylor is about 7 million cases. Mirassou, now in its 126th year, with the fifth-generation lads in command of the label, is moving up to 300,000 cases of premium wines per year.

All of the above wineries produce splendid wines, many medal-winners and striking values.

WE'LL CONCLUDE with a tip to the sequel to that Almaden 1977 Monterey Cabernet Sauvignon.

The 1978 is now in release and sells for $4.50. It's equally splendid in its varietal excellence, breed and readiness for enjoyment.

If you're looking for a California Champagne that's clean, fresh, soft, charming and delightful, with style and affordability, try the Paul Masson 1978 California Champagne— Brut is $7.

For about $3 a bottle, you're missing some of the best bargains around if you haven't tried the new Ernest & Julio varietals of Chenin Blanc, Sauvignon Blanc and French Colombard.

All of the above wines come from impeccable Golden Age California wineries, where science and art have been married for several decades. If you haven't known about it until now, you've been missing out on some of the most joyous parts of our heritage.

Wine snobbery went out with running boards.

Big is beautiful in winemaking today, more often than not.

Dancers evoked the spirit of Isadora Duncan and the Symphony successfully challenged Bartok

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

WHY DOES an ensemble of appropriate instrumentalists playing a piano quartet by Brahms enjoy, at least, a respectful and even reverent audience while a modern realization of the 1920s ideas of Isadora Duncan stimulated amusement and comic asides?

After a Sunset theater performance by the Dionysian Duncan Dancers last Saturday night an overheard comment went: "Isadora Duncan was a free spirit but . . . the spirit was lost."

The question implied, as was further considered, is what, if any, was the intrinsic relevance of Isadora Duncan?

That historians have credited her with inventing "modern dance" is potentially significant. That chuckles and scarcely concealed yawns attended the DDD program at Sunset Saturday were possibly no less so.

But despite the yawns and amusement there was displayed a sincere and committed exhibition of what is surely a dance style that will take its rightful place in American choreographic lore.

Isadora was a genius. That her followers have achieved an authentic reflection of her style (perhaps the most obvious aspect of her philosophy) is essentially an appreciation of that genius. But, like Paul McCartney's of the erstwhile Beatles, Isadora's was an innocent genius. She lived her talent as though it were life itself.

So did the Dionysian Duncan Dancers, and therein lies the essence of their success.

SIX YOUNG WOMEN from the San Francisco-based company displayed solid training in Isadora's unmistakable style. They served well that individual blend of classically inspired romantic kitsch that crops up in the literature and art of the late 19th century. The sentimental Elysian posturing and flapping of the pre-Raphaelites and Maxfield Parrish was indeed attended to with authentic study and discipline. The main distinction of success distilled to individul talent with Nancy Isham being the standout imitator of Isadora's ineffable persuasion.

Miss Isham, of diminutive stature, was bigger than life on stage. Her dancing was graceful and un-selfconscious. Her facial expressions were essential to her characterizations and radiated from a noble countenance that was part and parcel of Isadora's aesthetic. Her solo creation, Death and the Maiden (to a Chopin mazurka), was convincingly portrayed in all its melodramatic affectation. Her participation with Janaea Lyn in a complex sequence based on music by Gluck further underscored her unique abilities.

The quality of Isadora's example was immediately in evidence as the program began with two movements from Schubert's Symphony No. 9. The presumption to dance this sublime music borders on the heritical though, with appropriate deference to Isadora's spontaneous insights, the result was a successful complement to the music. The dancing, as much in the arms as in the legs, was graceful, naive and, in a youthful exuberance, sensible. If its character did not stray significantly from that mold during the evening, its quality scarcely failed to match it. The progression of solos and ensembles to piano music of Schubert, Brahms and Chopin was well organized and purposeful. In addition to the flowing Isadorian costumes, were occasional sashes and even rose petals. The sound and lights person was less together than the dancers.

The entire second half of the program was danced to music by Gluck. For those of the small audience who were not illuminated by this latter-day display of Isadora, it was at least a lesson in the appreciation of Gluck's music. Excerpts from his operas and ballets were stacked up in a sensible sequence and convincingly conveyed. Each number had a programmatic implication that was straightforwardly advocated in clear language. The furies, blessed spirits and pathos of romanticized ancient Greece were approached directly and with seriousness. Jean Farr presented a most attractive solo in the movement marked Gracieux.

The Gluck series and the evening came to an exhilarating end with the entire company pleasuring in a bacchanal whose revelry built to a tipsy conclusion.

Cheers to the Dionysian Duncan Dancers for the high success of their unique endeavor.

BARTOK'S Concerto for Orchestra, as much a monsterpiece as masterpiece, stood as this season's Mount Everest for the Monterey County symphony.

Sunday night (Nov. 16) at King Hall Haymo Taeuber and the musicians made the assault — and won.

The great Bartok score entered the repertoire of the orchestra a bit timidly, but otherwise in fine shape.

This is not the first time that the orchestra has risen with success to a difficult new challenge. During the past two or three seasons precisely those works that have been most intimidating are the ones that stand out in their respective seasons. Conversely, it is the tried and true that often falls short. It is, in the words of Oscar Hammerstein II, a "puzzlement."

One important reason for the Bartok success was that Taeuber played it "straight." He attended to detail with care and established and held steady and characteristic tempi. The almost infinite variety of folk elements employed by the composer were given good show and etched clearly.

The first movement developed nicely, but lacked increased dynamic charge, something King Hall may never allow. The strings were more precise in this complex writing than they had been earlier in the evening. A timid snare drum opening the second movement (Game of Couples) was joined by confident and skillful playing among winds and brass and the movement's atmospheric conclusion was deep and colorful.

The mood continued through the elegy, which enjoyed good solo attention, and the wit and parody of the intermezzo were vivid. (The program notes made no mention of the raspberries Bartok blows at the Shostakovich Symphony No. 7, though maybe that story has been told too often.)

The finale was an exciting race that precipitated a sparkling and smartly snapped conclusion, though again the full impact was softened by insufficient force of sound.

SOLOIST with the orchestra was Ida Kavafian in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto in E Minor.

Miss Kavafian is best known for her participation in the Tashi ensemble (with Richard Stoltzman, Peter Serkin, etc.) and her assertive and virtuosic approach to the Mendelssohn was a surprise.

Sporting a big, throaty sound, she brought a forceful bravura to the opening allegro that fired the music beyond its usual poised elegance. The slow movement was dry-eyed and slightly brusque, and the finale, liberally flavored with goulash and Paganini, was aggressive and brash, with occasional shreds of coarseness of tone.

While it was too pushy a reading for my taste, it never resulted in any contest with the orchestra. Taeuber led his ensemble in close complement to the soloist. The orchestra was clean and clear.

The charming Castor and Pollux Suite of Rameau that opened the evening fared not so well. The winds and brass made appropriate contribution, when they were on, but the strings were sloppy. Especially the violins were lacking in sufficient ensemble and articulation. The constant lack of crispness turned the precise and delicate Rameau fabric into sequences of blurs, and the lack of agreement on intonation added to that good old amateur sound.

THE NEXT subscription concert by the Symphony will be in late January.

Also, members of the orchestra and Taeuber will join the Choral Society at the Carmel Mission for a Christmas program Dec. 12, 13 and 14.

Scott MacClelland is classical music director for KWAV-FM.

Christmas song winner announced

Mrs. Alex Olivetti of Pebble Beach, a resident of the Monterey Peninsula since 1942, is the winner of the second Christmas Song Competition sponsored by the Christmas in Carmel Celebration.

"Music and the arts have always been a part of my life," says Mrs. Olivetti. "A 'house physician' for Pantages Theater in Seattle, my father made it possible for the family to meet many theatrical stars. Mother was both musical and artistic; grandmother was a gifted artist. An oil of huge proportions still graces the main lobby of a large Seattle hotel; and our stepfather was a concert violinist and violist."

From early childhood she and her sisters wrote, directed, costumed, and acted in their own playlets, charging the neighborhood kids two cents admission. During school years there were violin lessons, acting, poetry, painting, and sculpting; and in high school, as winner of a school song contest, she became interested in songwriting.

Winning an amateur contest, she appeared with Horace Heidt's band singing one of her own compositions and then had a brief stint as a vocalist with Anson Weeks' orchestra. A few piano lessons helped, but didn't give her sufficient skill to properly arrange or score her music. Good and talented friends filled in this gap, and demonstration records were made in Hollywood for distribution to record and publishing companies.

Following many rejections, a major recording company accepted several of her songs. The real break came when the Lennon Sisters recorded A Choir of Angels.

Mrs. Olivetti has appeared in most of the Peninsula's little theaters in comedy, drama and musicals. "My husband, two sons and I have come to know and love the whole area and its people — and this, alone, is something to write and sing about," she comments.

Her winning composition, The Lonely Christmas Tree, will be sung at the Christmas In Carmel Celebration to be held at Sunset Center on Saturday, Dec. 6, at 3 p.m. Everyone is invited to attend this community party. If you would like, bring your favorite cookie or other sweet to share with your neighbors . . . and a gift for the Christmas Bureau Basket to be placed under the Christmas tree in the lobby of the theater.

Collotype exhibit to open

The collotypes of Barry Spann will be on view Sunday, Nov. 30 through Dec. 10 at The Fine Print Gallery, The Barnyard, Carmel. Everyone is invited to attend a reception for the artist Sunday, Nov. 30 from 4-6 p.m.

Prints of 25 varieties and a few original drawings will be for sale. A collotype is a photo-mechanical process for making prints directly from a hardened film of gelatin. A solution of gelatin is poured over a sheet of plate glass. When dry, the sensitized film is exposed under a negative, desensitized, then soaked in glycerin and salt water, which causes the parts which have not been exposed to light to swell and become ink repellent, while the unswelled parts remain ink receptive, thereby forming a printing surface that functions on the lithographic principle.

Barry Spann, 31-year-old collotype artist, a former University of Texas art major, set off for London several years ago to find Arnold Fawcus, founder of the prestigious Trianon Press in Paris.

Spann had a hunch that his own fanciful graphite drawings held the key to his future if he could only find the right printer to agree to reproduce his work.

Trianon Press for 35 years had been the esteemed publisher of some of the world's most eminent artists — Cezanne, Rouault, and William Blake. What were the chances Fawcus would accept the work of a young man just starting out as an artist? Spann felt it was worth the effort to try.

He tracked the famous printer to the Tate Gallery in London where Fawcus was attending an exhibit of the English poet William Blake.

Having secured an introduction, he presented Fawcus with his portfolio and asked him to consider reproducing his work. Fawcus complimented Spann on his work, but initially told the hopeful young artist he didn't have the time and didn't usually do that type of work. But Fawcus thought a moment and reconsidered. Spann was elated when the printer replied, "I'll take the time."

"I don't know what I would have done if Fawcus had refused," Spann said. "In a funny kind of way, it all seems like an enormous gamble, but at the time, it was the logical thing to do."

Fawcus suggested that Trianon publish the work in a series of limited edition collotype prints for distribution in the United States and Europe. It was only the second time such an offer was extended to an American artist: Ben Shahn's Haggadah and Ecclesiastes were published in the 1960s.

Sadly, Fawcus died in June of 1979, and the Trianon Press is now closing its operations. But projects begun by Fawcus will be completed, and Spann's series of 48 drawings — the last original work to be published under the Trianon name — is scheduled for completion in 1981.

Julie Fawcus, the noted printer's wife, said of Spann's drawings, "Everyone who has seen them has remarked upon the marriage of painstaking technique with creative imagination which these designs embody. We feel Mr. Spann has a great future as an artist in Europe as well as the United States."

The gallery is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. For further information, phone 624-2372.

Backgammon

by Alfred Sheinwold

SHOULD YOU HIT A BLOT?

You, White, roll double-four in the diagrammed position. How do you play it?

Naturally you will move two men from Black's 1-point to his 5-point. Do you then go on with one of those men to hit the other blot? Or do you bring two men down to your own 9-point?

In general, stay on Black's 5-point. There's almost no better early move than to make your opponent's 5-point. There's no particular advantage in hitting blots aimlessly when you have a one-point home board.

You would hit two blots if you had a special reason for trying for a gammon from the very start. You might do so if this were the last game of the evening and you wanted to get out of the minus column; or if you could win the match by scoring two points rather than just one.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send 50 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed. No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

OFFERING

THE ALTERNATIVES

(a new approach to funeral service)

A selection of services uniquely compatible with contemporary thinking.

"THE PINE"...Cremation without services
"THE CYPRESS"...Cremation with memorial service
"THE OAK"...Burial without formality
"THE MAPLE"...The traditional Service

PREPLANNING IS A LOGICAL PART OF THIS CONCEPT

The advantage of "The Alternatives" is its unlimited flexibility. It can be traditional or contemporary... with or without ritual...small or large...indoors or outdoors...religious or not...whatever the family feels should be the appropriate tribute.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

You may look, but might not see

By The REV. LARRY FARRELL

Recently I washed the windows in my little home in Monterey.

I did not mind the fact that people could not look in, but I was reminded of the housewife who told a visitor that she could not understand her next door neighbor who always hung out dirty clothes on her clothes line.

Her friend said, "Her clothes are clean. The problem is that your windows are dirty."

Often we look at people and make false judgments. We think they are mean and selfish. We are looking at them through our own dirty windows. We must look at our neighbor and try to see what is good in them. We should look at them with kindness, which is another word for love. When we do not see good in others the fault often lies with us and not with them.

Finally, an Arizona newsman from Buckeye Valley wrote that the quickest way to become an old dog is to stop learning new tricks.

Amen

ON SECOND MORTGAGES

When mortgage money is plentiful, lower down payments are common and lending institutions are looking for borrowers for mortgage money.

However, the picture changes when money is tight. Often, higher down payments are required. If you do not have the cash to meet the full down payment, second mortgages are also available and nothing to be afraid of. The seller or some other party may agree to loan you the balance of the down payment in this manner.

The second mortgage on the property generally carries a higher interest rate and a shorter repayment time — usually from three to five years. The reason for this is the higher risk involved because the second mortgage cannot be satisfied in case of default until after the first mortgage is paid off.

The second mortgage can be an excellent way to complete the sale of property which would otherwise fall by the wayside. Listen very closely to your real estate advisor in this situation because professional expertise is a MUST.

BE THANKFUL TODAY—AND FOREVER.

We can count our daily blessings and once a year we can look back on this special day and give thanks for our collective blessings. Living in the Carmel area almost seems like the supreme gift of home life that one could enjoy.

We have lovely weather all year 'round. We have a beautiful seaside vista just moments from our doors. The hills and the trees that abound around us give us a feeling of the majesty of God and our lovely land. We can all be truly thankful for living in such a blessed area.

For those who might like to share our good fortune in the future there is nothing like property ownership here in God's Country. We offer these varied suggestions:

REAL ESTATE

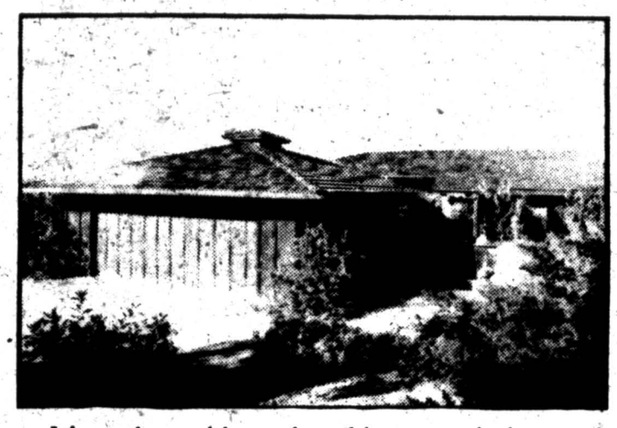
Top of the World . . . in Tierra Grande

It's hard to hide a house that stands near the crest of the northern hills and overlooks majestic views to east, south and west. Yet that has happened here, and it's not until you've penetrated the screen of shrubs and driven into the spacious parking plaza that the house reveals itself.



It's redwood board and batten, shake roof topped by a cupola with a brave weathervane. You enter through an iron-grilled gate, past a verdant patio and up to redwood double doors. Inside, a spacious hall and directly across, an atrium with playing fountain.

Turn right and you are in an intimate cedar-paneled den (or bedroom if you will) with great rising beams. Fireplace at the north, shelves across three walls, windows east and west. Off this a cedar-walled bath with another view of the atrium, beamed ceiling.

Stand at the hearth in this den, and you look down the broad center hallway over 60 feet to the living room. The bedroom wing branches right and kitchen and dining room are at left of this corridor, but the great room at the end holds your attention. It's almost 25 feet long, over 16 feet wide, picture windows looking south to the distant mountains, then bending round each corner for views to east and west. A second fireplace, white brick, is on on the west, and the formal dining room opens across from it. This is papered in an attractive pattern, an impressive chandelier hangs from the center, and glass doors go out to a warm and protected sundeck.

The master bedroom wing goes right from the main hall: 2 large bedrooms with master suite at the end, including large dressing room-closet and master bath. The second bedroom faces south, and its bath is across the hall.

There are subtle niceties here: long views inside the house; louvred doors which permit any section to be shut off; a variety of wall coverings including paper, paint and paneling; floor coverings of dark oak, lush carpeting and vinyl tile; a complete and hidden laundry in the finished double garage; a charming and well equipped kitchen and a surprising little breakfast room; lots of storage space.

The lot is just over an acre, with little care required. Address is 25370 Tierra Grande, corner of Telerana Way. $239,500.

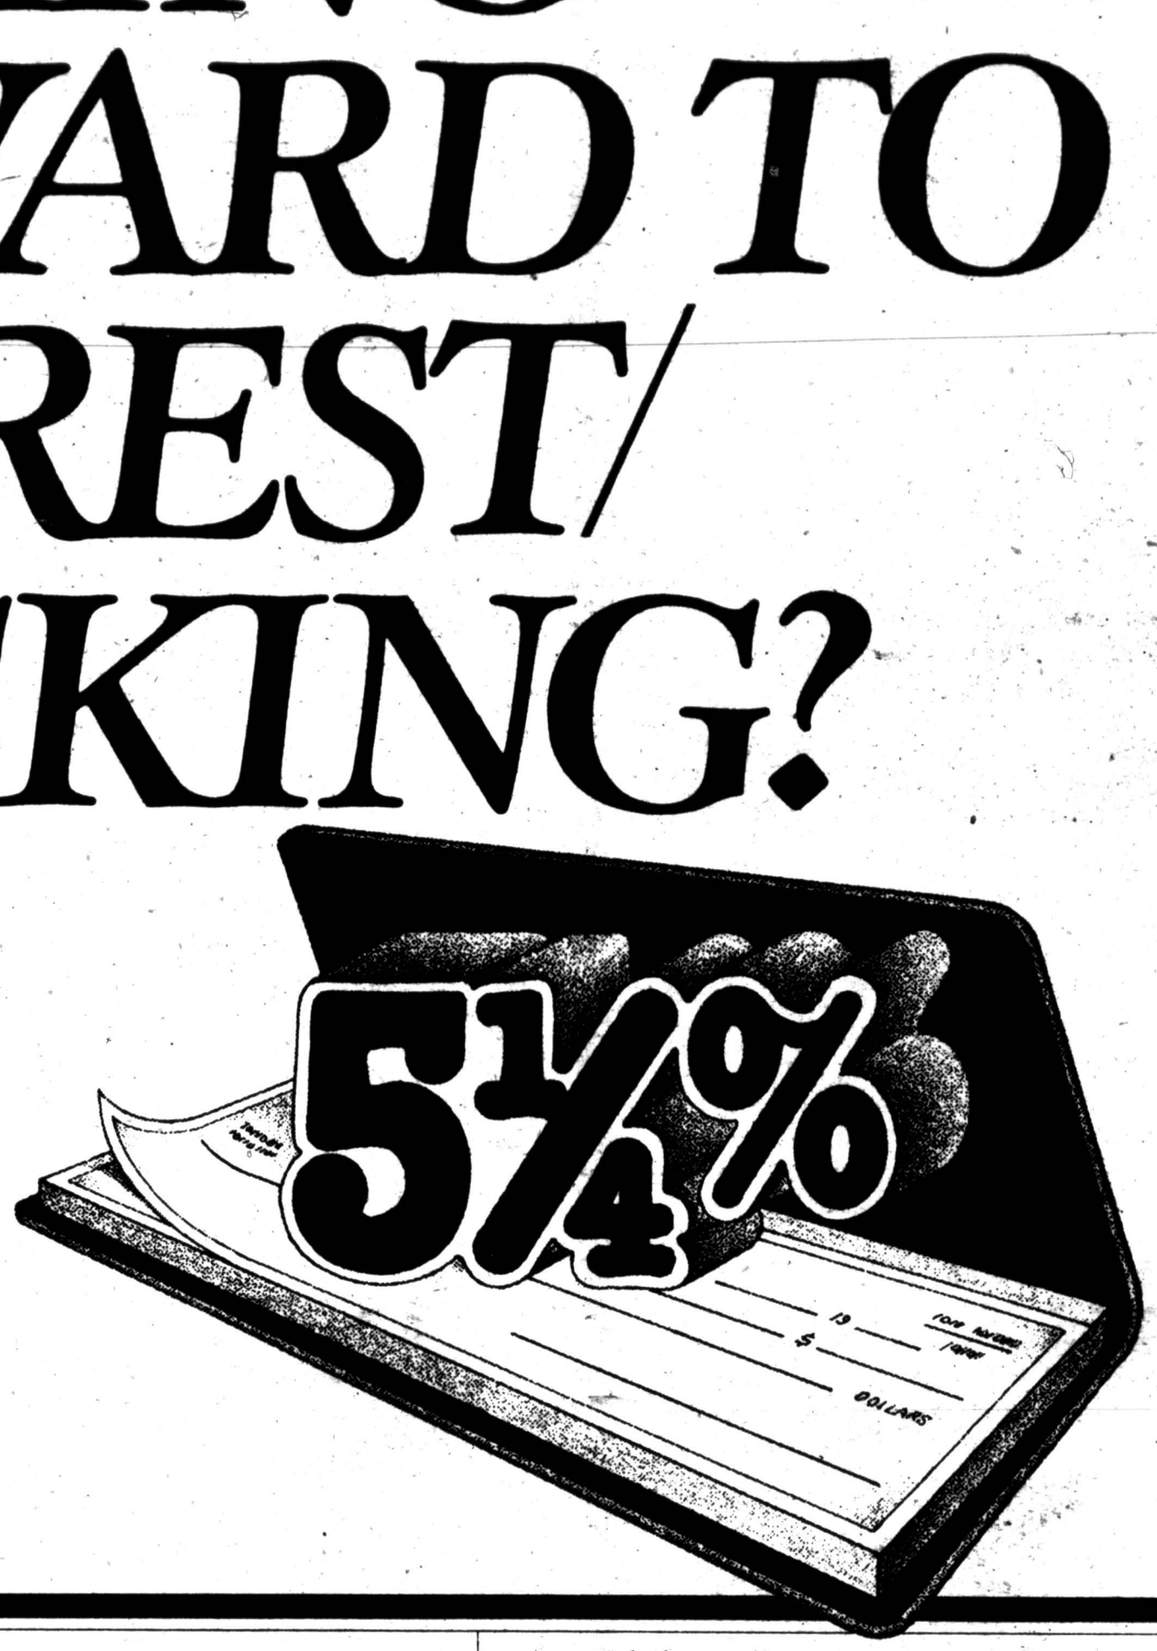
LOOKING FORWARD TO INTEREST/ CHECKING?



We've got two plans available now.

Some people like to keep all their money handy in a checking account. Other people like to keep a little money in their checking account and a lot of money in their savings account.

But almost everybody is looking forward to earning interest on the same money they use to write checks. So we've got two plans.

Our Premier Interest/ Checking Plan is free of monthly service charges with $1000 minimum.

Maintain a $1000 minimum balance in this plan, and you can have an Interest/Checking plan free of monthly service charges. You'll earn 5¼% annual interest on the same money you use to write checks.

Our Grand Interest/Checking Plan is free of monthly service charges with $1000 minimum.

Keep $1000 or more in your qualifying savings or time deposit account. You qualify for an Interest/Checking plan, free of monthly service charges paying 5¼% annual interest on any balance you maintain in your plan.

We've got two plans because people are different. But we've got one minimum that everybody can agree on. Our $1000 minimum is a lot less than a lot of financial institutions. And no bank or savings and loan pays a higher rate of interest.

With either plan, you can apply for a Combined Check and Charge Card (MasterCard™ or Visa®)/Ready Reserv-Account and Check Guarantee Card. And you can get either plan at any one of our over 590 offices all over California.

Right now, today, you can be earning interest on the same money you use to write checks. Come to Security Pacific Bank. We've got two different plans and one wonderful minimum. Because we're looking forward to serving people better.
